C. I. O. Aide Accuses Republic and Bethlehem at Hearing.

Labor Board Bars Weirton's Lawyer

Contempt Punishment of C. A. Armstrong Is Upheld Here.

By Sidney Olson.

Denouncing Bethlehem and Republic Steel corporations, Philip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, yesterday charged that the two firms "get fat" on Government contracts by wage-cutting practices.

As representatives of the Nation's big and little steel companies sat quietly in a gilt-and-green Labor Department hearing room, Murray complained that the substandard wage scales of the two big firms enable them to underbid on Government business the unionized 80 per cent of the steel industry, which observes higher wage rates.

Murray's charges of underbidding on Government contracts by Republic and Bethlehem recalled contrasting assertions by Administration officials in recent months that the steel companies submit identical bids on contracts for uses as divergent as battleships and public buildings.

Armstrong in Contempt.

Meanwhile, as the Public Contracts Board studied the problem of setting minimum wage rates for the steel business, another Government agency, the National Labor Relations Board, struck a blow at the Weirton Steel Co. by finding Clyde A. Armstrong, Weirton chief counsel, guilty of "defiant, contemptuous and contumacious behavior."

Armstrong was barred from any further participation in the board's case against the huge steel firm in a decision upholding an order by Trial Examiner Edward Grandison Smith banning Armstrong. Resumption of the 11-month-long hearings on charges that the Weirton company violated the Wagner labor relations act was set for August 24, simultaneously with the Armstrong decision.

Appeal Is Weighed.

John E. Laughlin, jr., who assisted Armstrong in some portions of the case, said last night that he "disagreed" with the board's decision. He added:

"I'm not prepared to say what action will be taken. I don't know

U. S. Job-Making Vain Expedient, Rockefeller Feels

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, July 25.—John D. Rockefeller returned today from Europe convinced the billions being advanced by the Federal Government to bolster re-employment were a futile, but expedient measure.

He said he was "still old-fashioned enough" to believe unemployment in this country would be solved through private capital rather than through Federal grants. He also said he was hopeful for world peace.

Arriving on the North German Lloyd liner Europa, Rockefeller was accompanied by Mrs. Rockefeller and their son, David, who was recently graduated from the London School of Economics, and will take his Ph.D. degree at the University of Chicago.

Books by New Post Columnist Have Been Highly Praised

Ernest K. Lindley, whose column will appear in The Post every Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Sunday, starting tomorrow, is the author of "Franklin D. Roosevelt; A Career in Progressive Democracy," "The Roosevelt Revolution," "Half Way With Roosevelt," and co-author, with his wife, of "A New Deal For Youth."
"History in the best sense"—"By all odds the clearest, most compact, and most accurate history of the New Deal"—are some of the phrases which have been used by reviewers of Mr. Lindley's books. His Washington Post column will be equally well received because of his unusual insight and broad experience.

Gov. Chandler Was Poisoned, Doctor Holds

'Doctored' Water Blamed for Illness Which Kept Him From Campaign.

By the Associated Press.

Frankfort, Ky., July 25.—Gov. A. B. Chandler, ill for days, is the victim of water "doctored with poison," Dr. J. W. Bryan, his Louisville physician, said in a statement today. The doctor said he did not know what kind of poison it was, but added "if consumed in sufficient quantities it would have caused death."

The Governor, smiling as of old, talked from his sick bed in the mansion with reporters, but declined to make public the physician's report. He referred all inquiries to Dr. Bryan.

Talks from His Bed.

Tonight he went on the air, speaking from his sick bed for his first speech since he was stricken with a stomach ailment last Friday in Louisville. He was brought to Frankfort Sunday in an ambulance. He is to return to the stump Thursday if his condition continues to improve.

Chandler is opposing Senator Alben Barkley, Senate Majority Leader, seeking renomination in the August 6 Democratic primary.

The statement of Dr. Bryan was dated July 24. It was made available to newsmen when the Governor later complied with a suggestion from Dr. Bryan that it be released.

Two Others Stricken.

Dr. Bryan is resident physician of the hotel in which the Governor was staying when taken ill.

Dr. Bryan said State Finance Commissioner J. Dan Talbott and State Highway Patrolman Jesse Wyatt who "drank from the same pitcher of water" with the Governor, became ill at the same time but were not affected as seriously as Chandler. He said no others had drinks from the pitcher.

The Governor, Dr. Ryan said in the statement, drank "more of the water than either of the other two" because "he was perspiring freely and giving a talk over the radio."

Japan Reports Kiukiang Falls In Fierce Fight

Chinese Lose Citadel on Lion Hill; U. S. Ship in War Zone.

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Tuesday), July 26.—Japanese shock troops, fighting through corpse-strewn, muddy battlefields in the bloodiest engagement of the Yangtze campaign, captured Kiukiang today after heavy losses, according to a Japanese communique. The city is 135 miles down the Yangtze from Hankow, the Chinese provisional capital.

Chinese authorities admitted the famous "God of War" Battalion, sworn to die rather than give way, had evacuated Lion Hill, which it held for three days of terrific fighting, to avoid encirclement and capture of the city.

The Japanese communique said formal occupation of Kiukiang was completed this morning after the vanguard entered the city yesterday afternoon. The communique said that the "god of war" battalion "escaped" from Lion Hill.

Chinese military authorities at Hankow admitted there was heavy fighting in the outskirts of Kiukiang "after additional Japanese had landed from the Yangtse above Hukow" and that Japanese warships had destroyed all villages along the river. They said the "god

Fugitive Laughs At Slow Police, Runs Into Prison

John E. Williams, colored, was laughing to himself Saturday night because he was outdistancing the policeman who was chasing him.

He turned his head to see if he was still being pursued—and ran head-on into a police scout car.

Yesterday Judge Edward M. Curran sent Williams to jail for 30 days after he learned the man had been at liberty only about 90 days on a previous intoxication charge.

6 Child Fatalities Spur Police Safety Drive; 2 Autoists Freed

Spurred by the death of six children in Washington streets since June 1, District police yesterday launched a double-barreled drive for strict enforcement of traffic laws and education of parents.

Meanwhile, drivers of two cars that figured in fatal accidents last week—one of them involving the death of a 9-year-old boy—were absolved of responsibility in inquests at the morgue.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, issued a special order instructing officers to warn parents of the danger of permitting their children to play in the streets without supervision.

"Full co-operation on the part of motorists, parents and the police is absolutely necessary in safeguarding children," he said.

More intensive application of traffic rules "both major and minor" was demanded by Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer at a meeting of motorcycle and crossing policemen at the Traffic Bureau.

Ickes Invites 3d Term Test Of Roosevelt

The Political Front.

The Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee was called to meet tomorrow to hear reports of investigators on charges of misuse of funds in Kentucky, Tennessee, Illinois and Pennsylvania campaigns.—Page 12.

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, predicted President Roosevelt would seek a third term. Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, said the prediction was an effort to evade the issue of "liberalism."—Page 12.

John L. Lewis suffered a setback in the Texas primary voting Saturday when five Representatives who had been placed on the C. I. O. "blacklist" were renominated, and Maury Maverick, backed by C. I. O., was defeated.—Page 2.

Ickes Enters Fight.

Interior Secretary Ickes last night declared there "would be no doubt what the answer of the people would be" if President Roosevelt should seek a third term.

Ickes, appearing for the first time as a radio news commentator, made no direct mention of a third term, but declared:

"If the reactionaries in the Democratic party want a real test of President Roosevelt's strength with the people, I suggest that they continue to work for a situation that will result in the people being given an opportunity to vote directly on the proposition of whether or not they are for President Roosevelt and his policies. There can hardly be any doubt what the answer of the people would be."

Slaps at Tydings.

In a similarly indirect manner, Ickes, speaking for a vacationing news commentator over Station WOL, took a slap at Senator Millard Tydings, whose foe in the Maryland Senatorial primary is avowed New Dealer Representative David J. Lewis.

"While on the subject of candidates muscling in on President Roosevelt and the New Deal," Ickes said, "it may be noted that Senator Tydings, of Maryland, has announced that he has supported the 'bone and sinew' of the New Deal program. Anyhow, this is a real tribute to the New Deal strength in the Senator's State.

"A friend from Maryland this morning remarked to me that Senator Tydings was doing a lot of

Ethel Roosevelt's Baby to Be Named FranklinDelano3d

Philadelphia, July 25 (U.P.).—The baby son of Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., and the former Ethel duPont will be named Franklin Delano Roosevelt 3d, the father announced today.

Roosevelt denied he had chosen a name for the child before its birth last Tuesday, although telegrams identifying the baby as "Battling Frank III" were sent friends and relatives.

Dr. Ralph M. Tyson, who has been attending Mrs. Roosevelt and the baby since its birth, said the infant has regained the 7 pounds it had at birth and that "it is fine and perfectly normal."

Monsters of Deep Drive Roosevelt To the Shallows

Aboard Cruiser Houston, Galapagos Archipelago, July 25 (AP).—President Roosevelt watched more than 300 men aboard the cruiser Houston get "the royal works" today as they were changed from "pollywogs" to "shellbacks."

Tonight the Houston, a 100 per cent shellback ship, dropped anchor off the west coast of Albemarle Island, largest of the Galapagos group.

As soon as the anchor dropped, the President was off in a small boat. So big and plentiful were the fish that he put aside his heavy rod and moved to shallow waters close to shore in quest of smaller fish. Unusually large schools of many varieties were running and the President took many of them on light tackle.

Earle Urges Law to Halt Graft Jury

Legislature Is Told to Smash 'Judicial Dictatorship.'

Bills Are Introduced to Suspend Corruption Charge Inquiry.

By the Associated Press.

Harrisburg, Pa., July 25.—Gov. George H. Earle, fighting a grand jury investigation of political graft charges against his administration, called upon Pennsylvania's Democratic-controlled Legislature tonight to smash what he termed "judicial dictatorship" in the State.

Opening a special session called principally in an effort to thwart the grand jury inquiry which begins here August 8, Earle recommended:

Subpenas for Carl B. Shelley, Republican district attorney of Dauphin County (Harrisburg) and former Attorney General Charles J. Margiotti, as a move to obtain any evidence on hand to support the charges of political corruption against Earle and 13 of his associates. The charges include conspiracy to cheat and defraud the Commonwealth, blackmail and extortion.

Exercise of the Legislature's "constitutional rights" to "resist overlordship" by the courts and to take "appropriate action with respect to all persons responsible for or partaking in it."

Receives Ovation.

The Governor smiled broadly as the joint session gave him a 5-minute ovation at the conclusion of his message.

Bills were introduced in quick succession in the House to suspend the grand jury investigation and set up a special committee to hear evidence, subpena witnesses, and otherwise control the investigation. The house then adjourned until 1 p. m. tomorrow. The Senate ended its session without touching on the inquiry and was scheduled to reconvene at noon.

The legislation would empower the appointed attorney general to supersede a county prosecutor in any criminal action, and require that in all future charges of misdemeanor against civil officers a county grand jury shall receive its evidence in public.

Impeachment Seen.

The Governor's demand for "appropriate action" was quickly interpreted by some Democratic legislators as an indication an attempt may be made to impeach certain judges.

Earle, Democratic nominee for United States Senator, originally summoned the Legislature, he said, "to bring into the open" all phases of Shelley's investigation. Some of Kilday, Winner Over Maverick, Got 'As' at G. U.

Paul J. Kilday, San Antonio attorney, who unseated Representative Maury Maverick, of Texas, in Saturday's Democratic primary, was recalled yesterday as a "grade A" student at the Georgetown University School of Law, where he was graduated in 1922.

"He had a fine record all the way, with an average of 90 per cent in his studies," remarked the Rev. Francis E. Lucey, S. J., regent of the law school.

Shower Forecast Pushes D.C. Near To Rain Record

The District's marathon of rain poured on last night into what in all probability will constitute an all-time endurance record.

Rain has fallen on Washington for nine days, but the Weather Bureau last night said available records weren't clear as to whether the previous mark of successive days of rainfall had been broken.

In 1919, the bureau said, rain fell on eight or nine successive days. In quantity, at least, the previous marathon was way ahead of the present one, the score being: About 6 inches of rain for the 1919 period, 3.48 inches for the present one, including last night's shower.

The question of endurance superiority should be settled today inasmuch as last night's forecast was "cloudy, probable showers."

British Peer to Mediate Czech-Nazi Struggle; Italy Puts Curb on Jews

By the United Press.

Rome, July 25.—Achille Starace, secretary of the Fascist party, announced tonight that the government has drafted a series of laws to "defend the race against all contamination" and affecting the activities of about 40,000 Italian Jews.

Jews Are Alarmed.

The party leader, one of Premier Mussolini's chief aides, said the principal activity of the Fascist institute of learning during the next Fascist year, beginning October 28, will be "the elaboration and dissemination of Fascist racial principals."

Starace declared the Jews of every country provided "the general staff of anti-fascism."

The party communique issued tonight recalled Mussolini's speeches and writings contending that the "Italian race" belongs to what he termed the "Indo-European group."

Mounting Sentiment.

The communique made it clear that the recent anti-Semitic campaign in the controlled Italian press will be backed up by official government actions.

Jewish intellectual and business circles were considerably alarmed by the communique.

Starace's announcement followed several weeks of growing anti-Semitic sentiment, climaxed last Friday by a government order of expulsion served on Dr. Edward D. Kleinlerer, for 14 years Rome correspondent of the Jewish Telegraphic Agency.

Jews Tenth of a Per Cent.

At the same time the Italian press, in an "inspired" chorus, demanded measures to "defend the race."

Discrimination against Jews has been felt in Italy for some time, particularly in the motion-picture, theatrical and newspaper enterprises and in universities and public institutions where Jews have occupied important posts.

Most of Italy's 40,000 Jews are fairly prosperous business men and intellectuals and many of them have hitherto identified themselves with fascism. They comprise about one-tenth of 1 per cent of the population.

Bomb Kills 35 Arabs; 4 Jews Die in Reprisal

By the Associated Press.

Haifa, Palestine, July 25.—Terror gripped this Mediterranean port tonight after a terrific bomb explosion killed 35 Arab men and women in the crowded market place.

Rioting, arson and violence spread swiftly. Four Jews were killed and eight were wounded in Haifa proper before the curfew was imposed.

Disorders in other sections of the Holy Land raised the total casualties during the day to 45 killed and 75 wounded.

Marines from the British battle cruiser Repulse landed light artillery and posted guards throughout Haifa, mainly on the borders of the Arab and Jewish quarters.

Time Bomb Goes Off.

Police said the market place disaster was caused by a time bomb which exploded with such tremendous force it blew human beings and animals to pieces in all directions.

Scores of grief-stricken widows and children, screaming and tearing their garments, were seen before the curfew was imposed.

In widespread fires which followed the explosion a whole Jewish bazaar quarter was wiped out.

The day's casualties brought the dead and wounded since July 5 to more than 400—an average of 20 a day.

The market place explosion was near the spot where 21 were killed and 60 wounded July 6. Arab villagers had gathered in the early morning coolness. Donkeys laden with melons, oranges and other produce were jammed in little lanes.

As they were unloading their produce and displaying it, the bomb burst, sending men, women and animals into a sprawling heap of death.

Persons able to run plunged madly, trampling the dead and dying.

Parliament Called By Premier Hodza

Negotiator Suggested by London, Approved by Germany.

By the United Press.

Prague, July 25.—The Czechoslovak government tonight accepted a British proposal, approved by Germany, to dispatch Lord Runciman, former president of the British Board of Trade, to Prague in the role of mediator in the Sudeten German minority dispute.

Lord Runciman is expected to arrive here within a few days and to serve as adviser during negotiations between Premier Hodza and Konrad Henlein, Sudeten German Party leader.

Henlein "Rules Out War."

The London Daily Telegraph's correspondent at Eger, Czechoslovakia, in a dispatch published there today, quoted Henlein as saying "I absolutely rule out war as a possible solution of Sudeten difficulties."

"No matter how the negotiations turn out, there will be no war so far as we are concerned," Henlein was quoted as saying.

"We do not want our borderland homes converted into battlefields . . . The agreement, however, will have to be a real agreement based on genuine concessions by the other side as well as ours. I repeat that nothing short of full autonomy is acceptable to us and I will never be swerved therefrom.

Parliament Convoked.

"We do not ask annexation to the German Reich and we do not demand a plebiscite, although our people desire both, but I am restraining them. We are not opposed to the Czech state."

Premier Hodza tonight convoked the Czechoslovak Parliament for August 2 in an apparently determined effort to invest himself with dictatorial powers over economic and financial matters.

It was not believed, however, Hodza's proposed minority reform statute would be introduced at that time, but that other government

Franz, Sovereign Of Liechtenstein, Dies at Felsburg

Vienna (Tuesday), July 26 (U.P.).—Prince Franz I, 85, sovereign of the principality of Liechtenstein, died at Castle Felsburg, Czechoslovakia, Sunday after a lengthy illness, it was learned here belatedly today.

March 31 Prince Franz, then quite ill, delegated administrative powers over the principality and vast estates outside of Liechtenstein to his nephew, Prince Franz Joseph, but himself retained formal sovereign powers.

Prince Franz Joseph now succeeds to the throne and full powers under the title Prince Franz Joseph II. He is 31. The old prince was commonly believed to be one of the ten richest men in the world.

Franz's full title was Sovereign Prince and Ruler of the House Von und zu Liechtenstein, Duke of Troppau and Jaegerndorf, Count Zu Reidberg, and, as such, ruler of the little independent state which nestles between Austria and Switzerland. Its area is 65 square miles, its population 10,200 souls.

2 Die, 31 Hurt in Puerto Rico As 5 Assassins Miss Winship

By the Associated Press.

Ponce, Puerto Rico, July 25.—More than a dozen shots were fired at Maj. Gen. Blanton Winship, Governor of Puerto Rico, today while he was reviewing a parade celebrating American occupation of the island.

Gov. Winship was not hurt, although the attack precipitated an affray in which 2 Puerto Ricans were killed and at least 31 wounded, including 3 women.

Police said one of the men killed, Angel Esteban Antongiorgi, was among the Governor's attackers. They described him as a member of the Nationalist Party, a group demanding Puerto Rico be made independent of the United States.

Police tonight charged Elifaz Escobar and Tomas Lopes de Victoria with first degree murder in connection with the shootings. Escobar is one of the 11 Nationalists tried and found innocent of killing police in the Palm Sunday outbreak here of 1937. Victoria was a captain of cadets at the time of the Palm Sunday riot.

Police said six others were being held for questioning, including two

5 Blacklisted By C. I. O. Keep House Seats

Results of Texas Primary Are Severe Blow to John L. Lewis.

By William V. Nessly.

The first battle in John L. Lewis' campaign to purge House committees of "reactionary" chairmen and members ended in a complete five-sided defeat for the husky chieftain of the C. I. O. forces, a study of the Texas primary voting on Saturday revealed yesterday.

The C. I. O.'s political adjunct, Labor's Nonpartisan League had placed on its "blacklist" of July 15 the names of five Texas House members, three of them committee chairmen, who were to be defeated.

All five won renomination, equivalent to re-election in Texas.

In addition, the C. I. O. indorsed Representative Maury Maverick, energetic liberal whose views sometimes went farther to the left than those of the Administration, and Maverick was defeated by young Paul Kilday, bearing the indorsement of William Green's American Federation of Labor.

Maverick Philosophic.

Maverick, in his home, accepted his forced retirement but said he didn't know for how long it would be. "Lincoln was beaten four times," he philosophized, "Who am I to complain?" He attributed his defeat to the San Antonio "machine" and "anti-Roosevelt money."

The Texas election, marked by the spectacular success of the unorthodox campaigner, W. Lee O'Daniel, who used a hill billy band and the Golden Rule to attain the governorship, also troubled two New Deal Congressmen besides Maverick.

Representative Morgan Sanders definitely was eliminated when he ran third in the race for his House seat, thereby losing any chance to enter the run-off primary as one of the two high men.

In addition, Representative W. D. McFarlane ran second to Ed Gossett, 22,362 to 25,450, though he will be in the run-off and may still be returned to the House.

Had Roosevelt Aid.

McFarlane had been hailed by President Roosevelt as "my old friend" while the President was crossing Texas ten days ago.

Maverick was loud in praise of the President's court and reorganization measures and practically all New Deal undertakings. He introduced the President's draft of the court plan immediately upon its being received from the White House.

The Lewis setback in the Lone Star State followed other rebuffs in his political enterprises.

The C. I. O. was actively back of the Thomas Kennedy-S. Davis Wilson ticket, defeated in the Pennsylvania Democratic primary, and it indorsed Judge Benjamin Hilliard for the Senate in Colorado against Senator Alva B. Adams. A. F. of L.-indorsed, but Hilliard failed to get enough votes in the State Democratic Assembly to get on the ballot. In addition, Homer Martin, head of the C. I. O.'s United Automobile Workers, supported Representative Otho Wearin in the Iowa Democratic Senatorial primary in which Senator Guy Gillette was victorious.

Lewis' fight to "democratize" the committee procedure in the House by eliminating hostile chairmen chosen under the seniority rule, followed his dramatic march to the Capitol in June, there to occupy the Speaker's room while he called in members of the Rules Committee and others to demand enactment of amendments to Walsh-Healey public contracts act, then held up in the Rules Committee.

His action raised a storm of protest and brought sharp rejection of his demands, the proposed legislation dying in the committee. Then Lewis and E. L. Oliver, head of Labor's Nonpartisan League, called for a change in selecting committee heads to remove those chairmen who were elected before the advent of the New Deal and held their posts by reason of length of service.

"The entire committee system of Congress," Lewis said, "requires reexamination, both as to the Rules Committee and as to the committees which report bills for action. The present system which enables a fractional minority to control our national legislature can no longer be tolerated."

Opposition Welcomed.

Several members of House and Senate declared they would welcome the C. I. O. opposition to them.

The "blacklist" of 13 committee heads, and other House members, as issued by Oliver contained names of these Texans:

Hatton Sumners, chairman of Judiciary Committee.

Joseph J. Mansfield, chairman, Rivers and Harbors Committee.

Fritz G. Lanham, chairman, Public Buildings Committee.

Martin Dies, member of Rules Committee.

Milton H. West, member of Flood Control and other committees.

All four had safe leads throughout the vote county Saturday and Sunday and West was unopposed.

Green, A. F. of L. head, last night issued a statement saying the Texas results "add another notable victory to the impressive list of primary successes already scored by the A. F. of L. this year."

Maverick said of his defeat:

"The reason? One must understand machine politics here; we have exactly the same situation as Jersey City. I ran independently with such organization as I could muster in the few weeks after the adjournment of Congress. More money was pourned into the opposition than was ever used in any Southern campaign, too.

"I did not lose any American Federation of Labor votes in spite of the letter of William Green against me—but the labor vote here is very small. The only effect was to give an instrument in the hands of the labor-haters—including the enemies of the A. F. of L., to get the reactoinary and anti-New Deal vote.

"The C. I. O. bogey was especially hot, since the C. I. O. practically does not exist here.

"I can take it and stay with it.

Ickes Dares Third-Term Test For Roosevelt; Slaps Tydings

Tydings

beefing about a little bone and gristle. He added that if the Senator had really wanted to prove that he was for the New Deal when the Senate was in session he might have put a little heart into it."

Several weeks ago, shortly after New Deal interference in the Iowa primary had backfired, Lewis pointedly asked that the Administration keep out of his fight with Tydings. The Administration backed Representative Wearin in the Iowa Democratic senatorial primary. The State gave his opponent, Senator Gillette, an overwhelming majority.

Boston Mayor Hit.

"In a Democratic primary," Ickes stated before mentioning Tydings, "every candidate is always for President Roosevelt and the New Deal, as witness the long line of ambitious, invited and uninvited, who chased down the tracks after his train as he crossed the country. Even a reactionary Democratic Senator or Congressman can be ambidextrous as he makes a grab for the railing on the observation platform."

Mgr. Ryan Backs Lewis.

Lewis was given a boost from another quarter yesterday when Mgr. John A. Ryan, of the National Catholic Welfare Council, scotched charges of radicalism made by Tydings supporters.

"I view with concern and some emotion," Mgr. Ryan said, "the effort being made in the Maryland campaign to distort the fine character of my friend, David Lewis."

"I cannot help but express for the sake of the record that, regardless of whatever else may happen, there will be no false pictures left in the minds of the people about this splendid and self-sacrificing friend of mankind."

Earlier, Ickes, in giving a running commentary on the day's news, accused Mayor Tobin of Boston of "trying to pull a fast one the other day on PWA" in connection with an application for $1,125,000 for a new city hall.

"The mayor, who is wired for sound, saw a chance to get a little free advertising for himself from the reactionary press and at the same time collect some free manna from heaven. So, in his best theatrical manner, he announced that Boston would refuse the money. . . . He wasn't going to heap additional burden upon the taxpayers of Boston. . . . Rather, he would let WPA doll up the present city hall with less expense to the city."

Ickes said "Harry Hopkins told him he had another guess coming."

Ridicules Helium Row.

Referring to his refusal to approve sale of helium to Germany, Ickes recalled Congress has appropriated for construction of a new Navy dirigible to be filled with the gas.

"Why the Navy should want a big dirigible filled with helium when certain critics living in foreign countries noisily insist that if we should give them some of our helium to use it would have no military importance, this great commentator will not attempt to explain. Perhaps Commander Rosendahl, who concurs with these foreign critics, will.

"In view of the controversy that has raged over this subject of helium the suggestion has been made that in the future it be spelled with a double 'l'."

Consoles Maverick.

The Interior Secretary interpolated consolation for Representative Maverick, defeated in a renomination contest in Texas Saturday.

"This is a distinct loss to the Nation," Ickes said. "Congressman Maverick is a straight shooter. He has ability, and, best of all, he has courage. This guest commentator predicts that even if there should be a temporary pause in Maury Maverick's valuable services to the people there will not be a complete stoppage of the valuable services that Maverick is capable of rendering to the Nation."

200 Are Rescued From Marooned Town in Texas

San Saba, Tex., July 25 (U.P.).—Two hundred persons marooned by the flooded Colorado River at Bend, 20 miles southeast of San Saba, were rescued tonight by boatmen from Lampassas, Tex., who braved the roaring stream.

O'Connor Seat Sought by Aide Of LaGuardia

Byrnes MacDonald, Young N. Y. Welfare Official, Enters House Race.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 25. — Young Byrnes MacDonald announced his Congressional candidacy today, with the approval of Mayor LaGuardia, in the campaign of all-the-way New Dealers to retire Representative John J. O'Connor (Democrat), New York, conservative Democratic chairman of the powerful House Ruless Committee.

MacDonald, first city deputy welfare commissioner, disclosed, after a conference with the mayor, his intention of running in both the Democratic and Republican primaries for O'Connor's seat.

There were instant indications he would receive backing of the American Labor Party, of which La Guardia is a member.

Alex Rose, the party's executive head, said such support was "probable," but that party leaders in general must make the final decision.

"Mr. MacDonald," said LaGuardia, "has my wholehearted support . . . He has the making, the background, education, intelligence and personality to make an excellent member of the House of Representatives."

MacDonald, an independent Democrat, is 29 years ld, describes himself as a "municipal government administrator," and is the son of a papal marquis, George MacDonald.

His statement, "I will not only be a candidate in the primaries, but a candidate in the general election," was widely read to mean that he would run in November as an Independent if necessary.

While such 100 per cent Roosevelt men as LaGuardia and Rose were gathering behind MacDonald, Republican leaders from O'Connor's district — the Sixteenth — including East River tenements and Park avenue penthouses—met again to discuss the possibility of offering him as a Republican candidate, but ended their meeting without taking action.

Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican), of New York, and John Burke, member of the National Republican Club's executive committee, have been among the strongest proponents of Republican support for O'Connor, Burke saying the Rules Committee chairman was in especially "strategic position" to fight New Deal policies.

Labor Proposes Rail Capital Cut

Chicago, July 25 (A.P.).—Labor demanded today that railroads reduce their capitalization and dividends instead of cutting wages.

George M. Harrison, chairman of the Railway Labor Executives Association, urged this alternative as his organization of 18 railroad labor unions began presenting its side of arguments over the proposed 15 per cent wage reduction for 900,000 rail employes.

Harrison asserted at the meeting with the carriers' conference committee, headed by H. A. Enochs, of the Pennsylvania Railroad, that railroads were overcapitalized and had been paying out too much in interest and dividends.

He said $14,000,000,000 had been paid by railroads in interest and dividends during the past 17 years.

U. S. Recovers $14,000,000 in Swiss Scandal

$7,000,000 Collected by Alien Company Is Ordered Repaid.

The United States Court of Appeals ruled yesterday that the Federal Government should recover $14,000,000 from the Societe Suise pour Valeurs de Metaux, a Swiss corporation, in an action linked to the alien property fraud scandals of 1921.

The decision upheld a District Court judgment which found for the Government in its contention the corporatoin had been paid $7,000,000 in a fraudulent claim involving wartime seizure of corporation shares. Another $7,000,000 covers interest held to be due the Government.

The Swiss corporation brought suit here in 1930 to obtain interest on $7,000,000 it had been ordered paid. Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue, before whom the case was tried in the lower courts, held that "fraud had been shown in the claim that the plaintiff made before the Alien Property Custodian . . . the United States Goernment through its officials is entitled to recover of the plaintiff the sum of approximately $7,000,000, with interest at 6 per cent."

The Swiss corporation filed suit on the basis of its ownership of two German corporations whose assets were seized here during the World War. The finding was that the Swiss company did not in fact own the corporation.

The appellate court stated that there was no clear proof the Swiss corporation actually took over the assets of the two companies prior to the founding of the Alien Property Custodian's office.

TVA 'In Black,' Rates Too High, Lilienthal Says

Defends Setting Charges Without Board's Approval.

By the Associated Press

Knoxville, July 25.—The Tennessee Valley Authority's power rates were based on a "calculated risk," but they are making money, TVA Director David E. Lilienthal testified today before a Congressional investigating committee.

The director asserted that while the rates were fixed in the TVA's infancy, five years before any allocation of costs, they have withstood the test of time and are, in fact, "too high."

"These reckless statements that we do not know the cost of power," he said, "and that we are losing money on our rates, have no shred of justification in fact."

Lilienthal admitted he established the rates and announced them without board approval, as charged by Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, deposed chairman of the agency, who testified last week.

He defended this action by declaring the board had authorized him to formulate a basis for negotiations with municipalities clamoring for TVA power, and that he reported on steps leading to the actual rate fixing.

Three months after the TVA was created in May, 1933, he said, the board authorized him to proceed with negotiations and the fixing of a basis for the wholesale rates, as well as retail "yardstick" rates for which municipalities would be permitted to resell the electricity.

Without formal board approval, he released the rate schedule to the press September 14, 1933, he said, describing the action as "just an advertisement to tell the public we had power for sale."

These early days were merely the basis for negotiations, Lilienthal testified, and were "substantially revised and amplified before they received final board approval" on October 14, 1933.

Representative Wolverton (Republican), New Jersey, declared the board authorized fixing of policies with reference to rate-making, but that he could find nothing to show the board authorized Lilienthal to fix the rates and announce them without approval.

GRUMPY LOSES his GROUCH... or... Beauty (and dry beer) soothe the Beast!

NEW CAR, BAH! WAITER, DO SOMETHING! DON'T JUST STAND THERE LIKE A STATUE!
I KNOW WHAT YOU NEED, GRUMPY. WAITER, BRING HIM A BOTTLE OF BEER... GUNTHER'S
BEER! LET ME TELL YOU SOMETHING, YOUNG LADY, THEY DON'T MAKE MY KIND OF BEER ANY MORE. IT'S TOO SWEET AND HEAVY NOW DAYS.
YOU WAIT AND SEE.
SO THIS IS GUNTHER'S! HMMM, REMINDS ME OF THE OLD DAYS. WHY THIS IS DRY AS ANY IMPORTED BEER. NOW ABOUT THAT NEW CAR—
YES, GRUMPY DARLING.

FOLKS WHO CAN'T TELL ONE BEER FROM ANOTHER OFTEN BECOME EXPERT AFTER TRYING DRY, BEER-Y GUNTHER'S

Strange, isn't it, how many people who always thought all beers were alike become good judges of beer after trying Gunther's?

On second thought, maybe it isn't so strange. There must be a standard of comparison. For instance, if you'd never enjoyed a fine, dry wine, you couldn't well qualify as a wine expert, could you?

Try Gunther's and notice how dry it is, how it is zestful and doesn't dull your appetite. That's because it isn't sweet. Notice the unusual flavor given by the especially high percentage of choice Bohemian hops. Domestic hops alone cannot approach that flavor. Taste Gunther's lightness. Mark particularly that it doesn't have a heavy body to quickly give you a "filled up" feeling.

When you've tried Gunther's and have enjoyed its dry, light-bodied beeriness, then you can compare it with sweet type beers. Then you'll know and appreciate the difference. Along with the majority of beer drinkers in this section you'll insist on Gunther's, the only "Special Dry Lager" made around here.

You'll be an expert, a real beer drinker!

Bar Head Fears 'Despotism' in New Deal Units

By Geoffrey Parsons, Jr.
Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cleveland, Ohio, July 25.—Arthur T. Vanderbilt, president of the American Bar Association, today said he sensed a drift toward despotism in the failure to subject th rapidly expanding administrative tribunals of the Federal Government to the same judicial standards democracies have established through the years for their courts.

After Vanderbilt had directed the attention of several thousand lawyers attending the opening session of the American Bar Association's sixty-first convention here to the administrative tribunals, a member of a notable example of such a body, the Securities and Exchange Commission, arose to defend its functions and demand that the association expunge from the record of a committee report "a slur on the character" of William O. Douglas, SEC chairman.

In a biting attack on Roscoe Pound, dean emeritus of Harvard law school and chairman of the bar association's committee on administrative law, Jerome N. Frank, a member of the SEC, expressed his "resentment" at "most unfair criticism" by the association's committee and praised the judicial character of the SEC's investigations.

Jackson Is Speaker.

The indirect exchange between Vanderbilt and Commissioner Frank high-lighted a busy day of convention speechmaking. Despite the anti-New Deal tenor of most official pronouncements of the American Bar Association, today's program included addresses by such outstanding New Deal lawyers as Supreme Court Justice Stanley Reed, Attorney General Homer S. Cummings and Solicitor General Robert H. Jackson.

Sharing the spotlight with the administrative boards, commissions and agencies was a less controversial but highly important item on the convention agenda, a draft of proposed reforms for the State courts, matching the reform in civil procedure that will become effective in the Federal courts on September 16.

The association's section on judicial administration today unanimously approved the recommendations for "streamlining" the State courts evolved by its committee. The proposals for modernizing and simplifying procedure in the State courts will next go before the convention's house of delegates. After the stamp of approval is placed on the recommended reforms there the organized lawyers of the country will set about persuading the various States to adopt the reforms.

Councils Proposed.

The outstanding recommendations made by the committee on judicial administration provide that:

The State courts control and be responsible for their own procedure as the Supreme Court is for the Federal courts.

Judicial councils composed of the representatives of the bench, bar, legislative judicial committees, law schools, laymen, and press, be established in every State to do research and draw necessary statutes and rules to promote the administrative efficiency of the courts.

The practice of holding pretrial hearings be adopted. The pretrial hearing would be in effect previews of the actual trial, held before a judge, to narrow the issues, stipulate uncontested facts, and speed up the judicial process by eliminating legal deadwood.

At a dinner at the Hotel Statler tonight, Justice Reed, begging his listeners to "make due allowance for the limitations of judicial propriety," contented himself with making the observation, in mild, philosophical language, that the lawyer should look on history as a continually changing stream and should not regard social, economic and legal philosophy of "the twenties" as the apex of human civilization.

Attorney General Cummings, another speaker at tonight's dinner, emphasized the need of procedural reforms in the courts. He said the revised civil procedure in the civil courts which becomes effective in September should now be followed by a similar modernization of the criminal procedure.

whether a constitutional question is involved. It certainly will work considerable hardship on the company, as Mr. Armstrong has been in entire charge of the case and was present at every single session. I was present not more than one-fifth of the time. It may be that this can be considered depriving us of rights without due process. Decision on an appeal to the circuit courts will probably be made tomorrow and announced from Pittsburgh."

Murray suggested to the Contracts Board that three regional minimum wage rates be set, corresponding closely to the regional differentials now written into wage-hour contracts with the Committee for Industrial Organization by more than 500 steel corporations, according to Murray.

These rates would be, for common labor:

Region No. 1—All States east of the western border of Minnesota, Iowa and Missouri, and north of the southern borders of Missouri, Kentucky and Virginia, 62½ cents per hour.

Region No. 2—All States west of the western borders of Minnesota, Iowa and Missouri, and north of the southern borders of Kansas, Colorado and Utah, and north of the eastern border of Nevada, and north of the western and southern borders of California, 60 cents per hour.

Region No. 3—All States south of Kentucky, Missouri, Kansas, Colorado and Utah, and east of the eastern borders of Nevada and California, 45 cents per hour.

Murray explained that the S. W. O. C. had not receded from the oft-stated C. I. O. stand against wage differentials but merely recognized "certain outstanding wage problems in the industry which we hope to eliminate through the process of collective bargaining."

Sharp contrast to the numerous carefully drafted briefs presented by lawyers for other firms was furnished by outspoken, bluff Hugh Morrow, of the Sloss-Sheffield Steel & Iron Co., Birmingham, Ala.

Morrow rose to utter vigorous protest against the setting of a 45-cent wage for common labor in Southern steel plants, as proposed by Murray. He roared:

"Why, a wage like that would mean the absolute economic disruption of the South!

"A wage fixed definitely at any figure will mean disruption. Your decision—your recommendation to the Secretary of Labor holds in it the economic life of the iron and steel industry.

"No one in the South understood the scope of this hearing and these proceedings. The Southern steel men would have been here in a body if they had. Why, I just dropped in on my way to New York. I would have flown up here if I'd understood the extent of what is proposed."

The hearing will continue today, as Chairman Holland expressed a desire not to rush proceedings, and more of the steel men are expected to be heard.

Va. Wife Flees Diplomat With Their Child, 7

Mme. Stranska Takes Plane to London From Prague.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, July 25.—Seven-year-old Mary Peyton Stranska, central figure in a Falls Church, Va., "kidnaping" plot last August, and her mother, Mme. Anna Henry Stranska, wife of a high Czechoslovakian diplomat, were believed fleeing from Prague to America today in the latest chapter of the 'round-the-world marital difficulties of the couple.

Landing at an airport near London, Mme. Stranska was quoted as telling of a secret flight from her husband, formerly first secretary of the Czech legation in Washington, now attached to the foreign office in Prague.

It was the second time little Mary had been "taken" by her mother. Two years ago, when Dr. Pavel Stransky was stationed in Singapore, Mme. Stranska returned with the child to her parents' home in Virginia. Last August, after a Virginia suit for the custody of the child had been contested by the diplomat, he allegedly took the child from the yard of Mme. Stranska's parents' farm and sailed for Europe. Mme. Stranska threatened divorce, but instead left for Prague in the fall. It was reported a reconciliation had been effected.

"Yesterday my husband was out of the house and I saw my chance," she was quoted as saying. "I told the maid to bundle up a few things and gather together all the personal papers she could find. Then I booked seats on the next plane for Mary and me."

Mme. Stranska said she got her visas renewed and papers for Mary in Paris, but heard her husband was following her and rushed for the first London plane. Her whereabouts in London were unknown today but she was thought to be planning an early and secret dash for the United States.

The fight for permanent custody of Mary already has assumed many-colored international complications. After a whirlwind five-day courtship on a transatlantic liner, the couple were married in England, June 29, 1927. In last year's Arlington County litigation both sides admitted that Mary was a citizen of Czechoslovakia and the defense charged that the court lacked jurisdiction to pass on the case.

After the State Department and international lawyers had entered the case, procedings were terminated last November with the announcement in Washington that both suits for custody of the child and absolute divorce brought by Mme. Stranska had been dropped. A "complete reconciliation" had been brought about, it was said.

Wife Tells of Ruse.

Mme. Stranska returned to Prague "as a ruse to be near my child," London interviewers quoted her today.

"But I dared do nothing immediately. In Prague the wife of a diplomat cannot be seen with a strange man. It is almost grounds for divorce. So I could not enlist aid.

"I did not want a divorce because my husband under the law could then claim Mary."

Mary stopped fondling the kitten long enough to say: "I am not a Czech. I am an American."

Mother Comments.

Mrs. J. B. Henry, Mme. Stranska's mother, told The Post last night that she had received no word from her daughter in some weeks and knew absolutely nothing about the reported flight. A brother said the last letter came from Prague about six weeks ago and that "everything appeared to be all right then."

A retired minister, the Rev. Mr. Henry lives with his family on a poultry farm near Falls Church. It was at this farm that members of the family saw two large sedans drive up last August 10. "Men in dark glasses" took Mary away in one of them.

There followed a week-long battle of attorney's statements which ended with the announcement that Dr. Stranska had embarked secretly with the child from New York.

G-men were even brought momentarily into the case when it was reported that gangsters had spirited away the child.

Exports Gain; Grain Shipping Sets Records

Favorable Foreign Trade Balance Exceeds $600,000,000.

While the Commerce Department was revealing yesterday that the United States exports had exceeded imports by $631,074,000 in the first six months of 1938, the Nation's railroads said new records are being established in handling the winter wheat crop, now moving to market in great volume.

The Association of American Railroads announced wheat receipts at Kansas City in the week ended July 8 totaled 9,714 cars, highest on record. It continued:

"The previous record, established last year, was 9,009 cars. Over the Fourth of July week-end, 3,605 carloads of grain were received in Kansas City, the highest number for any corresponding period on record. In the following week, 8,943 carloads of grain were received and, through overtime work at mills and elevators, 8,803 cars were unloaded, the largest number to be unloaded at that point in any similar period.

32,000,000 Bushel in Week.

"More than 32,000,000 bushels of winter wheat were received in the week ended on July 8 at Kansas City, Wichita, Salina and Hutchinson, Kans.; Enid, Okla., and Fort Worth, Tex. This was almost equal to the entire winter wheat crop of either Missouri or Texas. At Fort Worth in the week ended on July 8, 2,519 cars of winter wheat were received. Other receipts that week included 2,581 cars at Hutchinson; 2,070 cars at Wichita; 1,500 cars at Salina, and 1,643 cars at Enid.

The Commerce Department reported exports for the first half of 1938 totaled $1,592,137,000, an increase of $55,575,000 over the corresponding period of 1937.

Imports amounted to $961,063,000 in the first half of the year, a decline of $722,358,000 from the first half of 1937.

June exports, the department said, were $232,686,000, an excess of $86,788,000 over the import total of $145,898,000.

Both exports and imports for June were below those for June of 1937.

Armies Clash Hand to Hand For Kiukiang

of war" battalion had salvaged its artillery.

[The United States gunboat Monocacy was in the thick of shellfire and aerial bombardment when eight Japanese warships steamed up the Yangtze River past the Kiukiang waterfront and anchored 1,300 yards down stream from the American ship, which was 3 miles upstream from Kiukiang, the Associated Press said.

[The three torpedo boats and five gunboats began an intensive bombardment of Chinese shore positions southwest of Kiukiang while Japanese airplanes kept up a heavy bombing of troops concentrations on the north bank about a mile from the Monocacy.

[Japanese airplanes zoomed over the Monocacy several times yesterday, but departed apparently after satisfying themselves of the nationality of the vessel. Anchored near the Monocacy today was the British gunboat Cockchafer, a British merchant ship and a Standard Oil tanker.—Editor's note.]

Japanese Pass Kuling.

Meanwhile, a Japanese column which circled to the south had passed Kuling, which the Chinese claim is undefended. Reports indicated the Japanese made no effort to attack the city, which lies south of Kiukiang on the Nanchang Railway.

[Fifty Americans, including many women and children, who intended to remain at Kuling, informed the United States Consul General, Paul Josselyn, at Hankow, that Chinese military forces were approaching to defend the town, the Associated Press said. The Chinese requested the Americans to evacuate.

[As the Americans had waited until evacuation aboard the Monocacy probably was impossible, the American consul asked Chinese authorities to give all possible protection until the Americans' departure by roads west of Kuling was possible.—Editor's note.]

The Japanese column reportedly was advancing toward Kiukiang north of the city, presumably to outflank the Chinese, who are defending that city against the drive from the east. The Japanese virtually dominated the west bank of Poyang Lake, after a week-long drive, in which hundreds were shot down or drowned in the lake.

Reports from the north indicated the Japanese advance along the Lung-hai Railroad and Yellow River front was slowing down due to the excessively hot weather. The temperature was reported as high as 140 degrees and Yellow River floods were increasing.

Deaths Rise to 42 In Bogota Plane Crash, More Dying

Bogota, Colombia, July 25 (AP).—Eight additional deaths today brought to 42 the number of victims of a stunting army plane which crashed yesterday into a crowd of 50,000 watching a military review.

Many of the remaining 142 persons injured were in grave condition. They were visited by President Alfonso Lopez, who was unhurt, although his stand was struck by the plane.

Memorial services were held in the Plaza Bolivar before the cathedral where caskets of the victims were assembled.

The government announced it would pay burial expenses for the dead and medical expenses for those injured.

35 Arabs Killed By Bomb at Haifa

Palestine

Arson broke out. At least nine buildings were set on fire.

British marines, troops and police reinforcements rushed to quell the rioting and set to work clearing the debris. Ambulances took loads of injured to three hospitals.

Curfew Declared.

Authorities declared a curfew for tonight over the entire city. A daylight curfew was decreed for the mixed quarters. Guards were posted at the entrance to the Jewish quarters.

A party of 80 American tourists who arrived in Jerusalem from Egypt had part of their tour cancelled. Closely guarded, they toured Bethlehem and the old city of Jerusalem, but tours to Nazareth and Tiberias, on the shore of the Sea of Tiberias (Lake of Galilee), were cancelled. Tomorrow they are leaving for Jaffa, where their ship is awaiting them.

Another party of tourists was fired upon yesterday by snipers near Athlit, south of Haifa. No one was hurt.

In today's Holy Land disturbances an Arab mounted policeman was slain at Jenin and a 24-hour curfew was imposed. A Jewish supernumerary patrol was ambushed near Nazareth and one constable was killed and another wounded.

A land mine exploding under a motor truck carrying Jewish laborers on the plains of Sharon killed one and wounded two seriously.

3 Boy Pirates Get 'Church' Sentence

Santa Cruz, Calif., July 25 (AP).—Three juvenile "pirates" who sailed away in a "borrowed" $25,000 yacht last May and got as far as Puerto Vallarta, Mexico, must go to church and learn the Ten Commandments.

Superior Judge Roy B. Maxey sentenced the trio today to Preston Reformatory, but suspended commitment on condition the "pirates" use no liquor or tobacco, attend religious services weekly, learn the Ten Commandments, make no public appearances and refrain from writing or authorizing any articles or permitting pictures to be taken.

British Peer to Be Mediator In Czech-Sudeten Peace Talk

bills will be discussed first, inasmuch as Parliament has not been in session since May 10, 11 days before Czech-German relations approached the status of an international crisis.

Reveals British Concern.

Presentation of the minority statute to Parliament depends upon the outcome of the coming negotiations of Hodza with the government's coalition party leaders and Sudeten German deputies.

The inner political committee today adopted a final draft of the government's language law, affecting all minorities, and is expected to draw up the final text of the minority statute Tuesday.

Reports of Lord Runciman's selection for the important task were regarded by observers as forceful evidence of Britain's desire to avoid a breakdown in the Sudeten-Czech negotiations at a time when Germany's co-operation in a plan of European appeasement is believed to be in sight.

The almost unprecedented move in placing a prominent British statesman at the disposal of rival parties in a situation threatening war was taken in some quarters as lending credence to recent French reports Germany might resort to forceful measures if peaceful solutions fail in Czechoslovakia.

Lord Runciman is a shipping magnate and director of many large corporations. He visited Washington last year to confer on an Anglo-American trade pact. He bitterly opposed continued sanctions against Italy in the Italo-Ethiopian conflict. He has been in relative political retirement since he inherited his father's title in 1937 and resigned his board of trade post in the cabinet. He is a National Liberal.

German Reserve Call Seen.

Berlin, July 25, (U.P.).—Large contingents of German army reserves, it was reported tonight, will be called to the colors for intensive maneuvers in August, when most European diplomats believe the Czechoslovak crisis will reach a showdown.

Informed observers did not attach great political significance to the maneuvers, apparently decided upon several months ago, but said they would provide an impressive show of Germany's military strength at a time when world attention is focused upon the Nazi-Czech tangle.

It was indicated many thousand reserves already have joined the colors for the usual summer maneuvers and training. The extent of this reserve mustering this year is believed greater than in previous years because of the large quota of engineers supervising construction of fortifications in the Rhineland.

The Rhineland fortification work is being intensified with the aid of draft labor, conscripted under Field Marshal Goering's recent decree.

Reservists who will don uniforms soon will bring the German army far above its usual 41 or 42 divisions of roughly 700,000 men. The new troops will be drawn from the ranks of the class which completed its compulsory two-year training on October 1, 1937; World War veterans who have received several weeks of training, groups serving eight weeks annually as part of regular army units and volunteers of the 1934, 1935, and 1936 classes receiving one year's training.

Parliament Convoked.

Special Cable to The Post.

London, July 25.—Tomorrow in the House of Commons Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain will make what he considers an important statement upon the situation in Czechoslovakia, which is fast approaching a climax.

The statement will highlight the last foreign affairs debate scheduled in Commons, prior to its recess Friday for a three-months vacation. Friends of Anthony Eden, former foreign secretary, are hoping he will also speak.

Czechoslovakian optimism was not shared in circles close to Downing Street. Well-informed observers see very little in the situation to suggest the disciples of Henlein and Hitler are prepared to modify their demands for full autonomy to meet what the Prague republic has to offer in the nationality statute.

Race Pride Appeal Credited to Il Duce

Milan (Tuesday), July 26 (U.P.).—An article in today's Popolo D'Italia, authorship of which was authoritatively attributed to Premier Mussolini, declared that "without a clear race consciousness the empire cannot be preserved." The article also taunted the naturalization system adopted by countries "in which the death rate exceeds the birth rate."

2 Slain, 31 Hurt As 5 Assassins Miss Winship

Winship

Nationalists, Santiago Gonzalez and Jose Chardon. The other four were Gonzalo Lopez, Agusto Rivera, Antonio Cisco and Guillermo Cosmbre Garragoiti.

Garragoiti was arrested when he went to the hospital to ask whether Escobar had been wounded.

The parade was in connection with the fortieth anniversary of the landing of United States troops in the Spanish-American War. The Nationalists had issued a manifesto against holding the celebration.

The second fatality was Col. Luis Irizarry, of the Puerto Rican National Guard. The wounded included Obdulio Rodriguez, the Governor's chauffeur; Miguel Angel Garcia Mendez, speaker of the House of Representatives, and Francisco Lopez Dominguez, commissioner of agriculture and commerce.

The First Battalion and band, Sixty-fifth Infantry, commanded by Lieut. Col. Enrique Urrutia, were in the parade. Their United States flag had five bullet holes, but no soldier was injured. No National Guardsman was injured except Col. Irizarry.

"Poor Shots," Winship Says.

None of the Governor's official party was seriously hurt nor were any continental Americans of the large crowd which had gathered in Ponce for the celebration.

Despite his narrow escape from harm, Gov. Winship was calm. His only comment, made to those standing beside him, was:

"What poor shots they are!"

A few moments later he delivered a prepared speech in a firm voice. At its close the crowd cheered him loudly.

Almost with the opening shot of the attackers, police returned the fire. In all more than a score of shots were fired.

The entire incident happened swiftly. The parade continued almost without interruption, many marchers unaware of what had occurred.

The president of the Puerto Rican Senate, Rafael Martinez Nadal, followed Gov. Winship with a speech in which he said nothing could show more firmly the growing love of Puerto Ricans for the United States than the manner in which today's crowd acted during the bloodshed. He paid tribute to Col. Irizarry as a "martyr" who died for his country.

Shots Heard on Radio.

Gov. Winship informed the War Department in Washington after the incident that "everything is now quiet."

Most of those injured were in the crowd, either on the street in front of the grandstand or on the plaza before the city hall. Col. Irizarry was fatally wounded as he led his National Guard troops marching past the reviewing stand.

The shots were heard clearly over a radio broadcast of the celebration. The announcer immediately becalmed listeners by reporting the Governor was unhurt.

By the Associated Press.

Gov. Blanton Winship informed the War Department yesterday "everything is now quiet" after the attempt made on his life at Ponce, Puerto Rico.

The Governor said he was leaving Ponce for Guanica, where he is scheduled to speak. An infantry battalion and a band will accompany him.

Gov. Winship, who retired from the United States Army in 1933 as a brigadier general, has been Governor of Puerto Rico since February 5, 1934. He is 68 years old. He received the D. S. C. for gallantry in action in the World War.

Attempt to Slay Gov. Winship Angers Puerto Rico Aides Here

Commissioner Blames Fanatics, Says Most of People Are Loyal.

Profound shock and indignation at the attempted assassination of Gov. Blanton Winship of Puerto Rico were expressed yesterday by Santiago Iglesias, resident commissioner here, and Tomas Diego, mayor of Ponce, where the attack occurred.

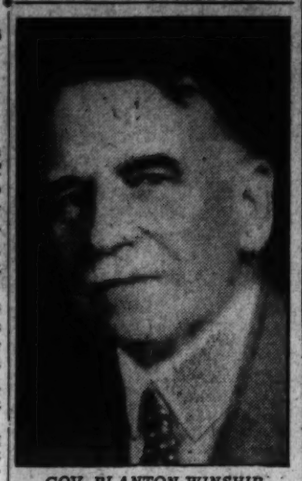
With Latin fervor and gestures Iglesias declared, "I am sure at this moment the whole people are very indignant about the unexpected occurrence which everyone will hate. The action was entirely the result of a few fanatics."

Mayor Diego, who is recovering from an appendicitis operation at Emergency Hospital, also emphasized that terrorist activities are carried on only by a very small group of Puerto Ricans who are members of the nationalist party which desires independence. They do not represent the majority of the island's inhabitants, he added.

"The whole party has only about 5,000 members," he declared. "Gov. Winship is very popular throughout Puerto Rico. Most of the people are entirely loyal to the United States and mean to continue to live under the democratic institutions now in operation."

Both officials cabled their regrets to Gov. Winship, who escaped uninjured, Senator Pedro Juan Sarales, who was slightly wounded in the right arm, and M. A. Garcia Mendez, speaker of the House of Representatives, who was shot in the throat.

Diego's secretary and counsel,



GOV. BLANTON WINSHIP.

Jose G. Vivas, son of Guillermo Vivas, editor of the Puerto Rican newspaper El Dia, said he learned in a telephone conversation with his father that Ponce is quiet.

Winship Criticized.

Walter McK. Jones, former Democratic national committeeman for Puerto Rico, said yesterday Gen. Winship had instilled in the insular police the army idea of shooting at the slightest provocation," the Associated Press stated.

Jones, a critic of the Winship administration, declared "before Winship went down there the insular police were very discreet." He said there was "no justification for 20 persons being injured today—unless a bomb went off in the crowd."

Colombia Calls Envoy Home for Inauguration

Colombian Minister Miguel Lopez Pumarejo said yesterday he would leave at once for Bogota by airplane to confer with officials of his government and probably would spend eight or ten days there.

The envoy said he had been instructed by his government to return to Bogota temporarily in view of the approaching change in the national administration there.

Morgenthau Guest Of Bullitt With 6 French Ministers

Paris, July 25 (AP).—Henry Morgenthau, jr., Secretary of the United States Treasury, closed a day of conferences with leading French financial experts by attending a dinner given in his honor tonight by Ambassador William C. Bullitt.

Among 30 guests was French Finance Minister Paul Marchandeau, who conferred with Morgenthau during the day on the tripartite monetary accord of 1936.

After their meeting they issued a declaration of "mutual desire to assure the maintenance" of the accord, in which Great Britain joined France and the United States in an undertaking to maintain currency stability.

Wimbledon Death Suspect Is Seized

London, July 25 (AP).—A 27-year-old truck driver was charged tonight with the murder of Mrs. Rose Muriel ("Irish Rose") Atkins, whose clubbed and slashed body was found near Wimbledon's famed center tennis court July 13.

The accused was George Brain, described by Scotland Yard investigators as "a husky, fat-faced frequenter of cafes, billiard rooms and dog racing tracks."

Brain was captured today on the Isle of Sheppey, near the mouth of the Thames.

3 U. S. Experts to Study Dominican Immigraiton

Dominican Minister Andres Pastoriza and Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles yesterday discussed plans for sending three United States experts to the Dominican Republic to study immigration problems.

The envoy also said plans had been completed for displaying at the World's Fair in New York in 1939 a model of the Columbus Memorial Lighthouse to be built in his country. Construction of the lighthouse is to be financed jointly by all the American republics.

Dollar Co. Subsidy Extended 30 Days

By the Associated Press.

The Maritime Commission announced yesterday extension for 30 days of the subsidy under which the Dollar Steamship Lines, Inc., Ltd., of San Francisco, are operating.

The subsidy, which expired yesterday, was made to the company last January and provided for payments of $1,500,000 for six months. That payment was based upon the operation of 13 ships, however, and the commission said it was advised the company now is operating only four ships.

Commission officials said the temporary subsidy does not affect negotiations for a permanent subsidy which have been going on since early June.

Georgetown Alumni At Bar Convention

Punch in Nose Halts Trial of 4 Auto Unionists

Melee Follows Row Over Who May Attend the Hearing.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, July 25.—Demonstrating supporters of four suspended officers of the United Automobile Workers Union today forced a day's delay, until 10:30 a. m. tomorrow, in the quartet's trial and charges of "frame-up," "irresponsible Communists" and "union wreckers."

Prominent also in the tense several hours before the union's international executive board adjourned late today were a brief fist fight and two visits from police in futile efforts to clear a crowd of demonstrators from union headquarters.

The board, controlled by Homer Martin, U. A. W. president, refused a formal petition to permit a "committee of observers" in the trial room. The board said such permission would "discriminate" against other union members.

A "committee of 11," named by the demonstrating delegation, charged in a formal statement Martin was "afraid to conduct the trials in the open," adding "it is plain a frame-up is being schemed by Martin and his ring."

The four officers slated for trial—Vice Presidents Richard T. Frankenstein, Wyndham Mortimer, Ed Hall and Walter N. Wells—were charged by Martin with partial responsibility in the demonstration.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

United Automobile Workers guards stripped photographers' cameras of film but this shot got through. It shows supporters of Homer Martin, U. A. W. president, and suspended officers scuffling in the corridor at U. A. W. headquarters at Detroit. The picture was taken just before George F. Addes, expelled secretary-treasurer, allegedly struck a member of the U. A. W. office staff.

At the hour of the scheduled trial today supporters of the suspended officers forced their way into union headquarters and demanded the right to attend the trial.

The demonstration was marked by a fist fight involving an expelled officer.

During a five-minute scuffle, George F. Addes, secretary-treasurer of the union, hit Maurice Silverman, advertising solicitor for the U. A. W. newspaper, on the nose.

Two men were sent to jail for one year each yesterday by Police Court Judge Edward M. Curran when they admitted they had engaged William F. Campbell was waiting for a train to take him to the Naval Academy to begin his first year.

Court Saves Man Summer in Jail by Special Hearing

Because it was unwilling to see a prisoner remain in custody through the summer, the United States Court of Appeals yesterday held a summer term to try William Reed, 34, wanted in Illinois on a warrant sworn out against him thirteen years ago, for parole violation.

Reed sued out a writ of habeas corpus in the District Court, which decided against him, then asked the Court of Appeals for a review.

The court that heard arguments was composed of Chief Justice D. Lawrence Groner, Justice Harold M. Stephens, of the Court of Appeals, and Associate Justice Oscar Luhring, of the District. Its decision will be announced later.

'Don't List' Issued To Curb Vacation Burglary Wave

A recent series of burglaries in the homes of vacationing Washingtonians prompted Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, chief of detectives, to issue the following list of "don'ts:"

"Don't leave milk bottles to accumulate on your porch. A row of bottles is an invitation to a housebreaker.

"Don't forget to have your newspapers sent to your vacation address. A pile of newspapers indicates an empty house.

"Don't lower all your window shades. This also indicates a vacant house.

"Don't fail to notify police when you leave the city. They will give your house special attention.

"Don't forget to lock all doors and windows. And when you are away, don't forget to always lock your automobile securely.

"Don't become too friendly with strangers."

More Efficient Justice.

Laymen may find little of interest in the new campaign for judicial reform launched at the sixty-first annual convention of the American Bar Association in Cleveland. The lawyers are discussing technical problems of judicial procedure. That seems to mean little to the man in the street. But it is just such discussions that may ultimately determine the quality of justice administered to the powerful and the lowly alike.

One reason for the notorious delay in accepting judicial reforms has been the lack of understanding and consequent apathy on the part of the public. The movement to regularize and simplify rules in the Federal courts began at least 30 years ago. But it has finally borne fruit. The new rules worked out by the Supreme Court and the Department of Justice will become effective with the opening of the courts this fall. Now the Bar Association is attempting to carry similar improvements into the State courts. With the aid of the public and the State officials, it is hoped they will succeed long before 1968.

For recent improvements in the Federal judicial system the Department of Justice deserves a large measure of credit. The bill permitting the Supreme Court to make uniform rules for the Federal judiciary was enacted only after Attorney General Cummings took leadership of the movement. He was likewise an influential factor in bringing about enactment of the bill creating 20 new judgeships in districts where speedy justice is now denied because of congested dockets.

With the pressure upon individual courts thus relieved and with procedural technicalities simplified, citizens will have a much better chance of obtaining prompt justice in the Federal courts. But, as the Attorney General pointed out in his address to the Bar Association, another major step remains to be taken. The courts still lack any semblance of business management under their own control.

In the last session of Congress a bill creating an administrative officer for the Federal judicial system was approved by both the Senate and House Judiciary Committees. That officer would be appointed by the Supreme Court. It would be his duty to arrange the business of the courts in the interests of efficient performance, to prepare annual budgets for the courts, to purchase supplies and render similar administrative service.

At present a number of these administrative tasks are performed by the Department of Justice. Since that department appears frequently before the courts as a party to legal disputes, this is far from an ideal arrangement. The judicial branch of the Government ought to be completely separate from the executive, even in the handling of its business affairs.

It is especially pleasing to note that Attorney General Cummings is the sponsor of this reform that would detract from the power and patronage of his own department. Congress is not likely to reject such a sensible proposal once it is directly confronted by the issue. But plenty of work will be required to revive the bill at the next session and bring it to a vote.

"Britons, Never" . . . ?

If a member of the British cabinet had publicly said in so many words that the time has about come for a return to the ancient institution of human slavery, you may be pretty sure that the remark would have been on the cables promptly. But when the same thing is suggested in roundabout modern terms, it is good merely for a short feature to be included in the mail dispatches. This is because we are prone, as Mr. Stuart Chase was recently amazed to discover, to do our thinking merely in words.

It was thus, presumably, that a highly significant statement by Sir Thomas Inskip, Minister for the Co-ordination of Defense, came to be placed on Section 2, Page 4, of last Sunday's New York Times. Sir Thomas said he thought it would eventually be necessary for governments to train all "drifters" to fill particular posts "in a world which is largely becoming mechanical." Whether or not he went on to say that having been trained to the job the child would be required to work at it, the dispatch does not indicate. But it seems an inescapable corollary. No modern State is likely to adopt so drastic a program only to have a youth say at the end of his training: "Thank you, but I think I'd prefer interior decorating."

A person who can be compelled by the State to spend his life at whatever work the State may decide is neither a citizen nor a free subject of the State. He is State property. He is not governed. He is owned. Moreover, the difference between bondage to State and bondage, as in ancient and feudal times, to individual is in the end largely one of scale. For the Master of the State is also master of its slaves.

It might be a good idea if we began to apply the word "slavery" not merely to something that used to exist but to something that currently flourishes in a large part of the so-called civilized world. Unfortunately we have other words: "totalitarianism," "collectivism," "Marxism" and so on. The Greeks had a word for it. And the word was slavery.

Interim Balance Sheet.

On the basis of contests so far settled, President Roosevelt has had a very limited success in convincing Democratic voters that they should send to Washington legislators completely favorable to his policies. The Texas election is only the last of a series of set-backs for the movement to elect "yes" men. For the most part, Democratic voters have clung to their traditional independence in choosing their own representatives.

While in Texas President Roosevelt singled out five of that State's twenty-one Congressmen for favorable mention. Out of that small group two have been defeated. Both Representatives Maverick and McFarlane were distinguished New Deal leaders. That may not have been the reason for their downfall, but it is evident that voters of those districts gave little heed to the President's wishes. Only one Congressman not on the favored list was beaten in the Lone Star State.

In Florida, last May, the New Deal won a significant victory in the renomination of Senator Pepper after the issue of loyalty to the President's policies had been clearly drawn. That was followed by the victory of Henry L. Hess over the more conservative Gov. Charles H. Martin, who sought renomination in Oregon. Gov. Elmer A. Benson's renomination by the Farmer-Labor Party in Minnesota may also be regarded as a New Deal success. Senator Thomas was nominated in Oklahoma after indorsement by the President, and Representative O'Connell won in Montana after making an issue of support for the New Deal.

These victories are offset, however, by a formidable list of independent Democrats who have again won the support of their party. Senator Gillette in Iowa and Senator Van Nuys in Indiana both survived vigorous opposition from Administration leaders. Representative Scott W. Lucas won the Democratic Senatorial nomination in Illinois, despite his stand against the court reorganization bill and the wage-hour bill. Senator Adams of Colorado, another court bill foe, is again the choice of his party. The nomination of Senator Clark is conceded in Missouri despite his emphatic refusal to serve as a "yes" man. And opposition appears to have been withdrawn from Senator Lonergan in Connecticut.

A summary of these outstanding cases, where the issue of adherence to the President's views has been raised, shows five New Deal victories. In eight cases independent candidates have either won or appear to be assured of victory. Those results hold little encouragement for that group which is trying to "New Dealize" the Democratic Party at all cost. On the contrary, they suggest that Democrats still insist on choosing their own candidates, in many cases on the basis of local issues, without applying the test of 100 per cent loyalty to the Administration.

In the face of this record it is difficult to believe that the President will openly intervene in the remaining Democratic primaries, at the conclusion of his vacation. Both wings of the party are still strong. The President cannot afford to arouse the antagonism of his more conservative followers at a time when Republican strength in Congress is likely to be increased.

For the same reason the current talk of a third term for President Roosevelt appears particularly untimely. Had there been more success for the effort to secure a Congress wholly subservient to the President, this talk might have had some meaning. But under present circumstances any actual move in a third-term direction would probably split the Democratic Party wide open.

Frenzied Puerto Ricans.

Another attempted assassination is reported from Puerto Rico. It was apparently the Nationalists again who fired at Gov. Winship. Fortunately he escaped harm. Last year they similarly missed Federal Judge Cooper. When they first ran amuck two years ago, however, they succeeded in murdering the chief of the insular police, Col. E. Francis Riggs, of Baltimore.

The interpretation to be placed on these attacks and many more demonstrations in like desperate vein is particularly difficult for continental Americans. Only yesterday the report of the Puerto Rican treasurer showed that general revenues for the last fiscal year set an all-time high of $16,600,000. This exceeds the figure for the total external trade of the island in 1898 and would seem to indicate that Puerto Rico has not fared so badly during its 40 years under the American flag. The wonder grows, then, as to what the Nationalists can be protesting.

The explanation begins with the fact that the Nationalists are an exceedingly small group. In the last elections in which they participated they polled less than 4,000 votes out of a total of 300,000. In general, the membership is composed of comparative youngsters, as was evidenced by the list of dead and injured following their parade at Ponce a year ago which provoked inexcusable gun play by the police. Attracted by secret meetings, flags, uniforms and golden promises, they have been putty in the hands of leaders ingenious in reconstructing history so as to bolster their hopes for the island's independence.

Unlike a much larger and entirely temperate group of Puerto Ricans who also dream of autonomy, the Nationalists have little regard for and less comprehension of the far-reaching economic implications of separating the island from the United States. A sample of their frenzied thinking was provided when Albizu Campos, their erstwhile leader, proclaimed publicly that President Roosevelt should be greeted with "bullets not flowers" on visiting the island some time ago.

Since then Campos and several henchmen have been packed off to Atlanta on charges of sedition. It had been hoped that this would suffice to disorganize or at least cool down the Nationalists. Apparently that has not been the effect. In these circumstances, authorities in Puerto Rico should have no hesitation in moving with resolution against Gen. Winship's assailants and all others who resort to violence.

The Split In The U. A. W. U.

Eliminating personalities, which always play so large a role in the fratricidal conflicts of organized labor, it is not difficult to find the underlying reason for the split in the United Automobile Workers Union.

In fertile soil this C. I. O. unit has grown like the proverbial mushroom and is not unlikely to wither away as such unless its affairs are henceforth ruled with more intelligence than has been present heretofore. The mass-production methods of automobile manufacture and the stubborn opposition of most of the companies to any kind of unionization combined to insure a very rapid development for the U. A. W. U., once it was successfully launched. And too rapid development is seldom helpful to stability in any organization.

Sit-down strikes, rioting, flagrant breaches of contract and indeed generally anarchic conditions began to characterize the labor side of the automobile industry over a year ago. The sins of management may have been partly at fault. But the irresponsible conduct of a union which was feeling its oats in a very flamboyant manner was certainly a dominant factor.

Came depression, intensified and partly caused in the automobile industry by the unrestrained attitude of labor there. And with depression Mr. Homer Martin, the youthful president of the union, realized that without a greater degree of discipline for his disorderly following it would disintegrate as rapidly as it had grown.

It is difficult for the outsider to measure the justice in Martin's suspension of four vice presidents and the secretary-treasurer of the U. A. W. U., sentences now under review by the union's executive board. But, just or unjust, it is precisely the sort of outcome which was foreshadowed by the organization's enormously rapid expansion, and the dubious tactics it employed while riding the crest of the wave.

This is the first serious internal revolt to affect an important C. I. O. unit. It does not of itself cast doubt on the essential validity of industrial unionism. But it does show that experienced leadership, disciplined membership and common-sense tactics are essential if industrial unionism, or any other form of labor organization for that matter, is to prosper.

Whatever the outcome of the current disruption, the tempo of the U. A. W. U. is likely to be slowed down thereby. The rift is obviously too deep to be easily bridged, unless the automobile companies should close it by ill-advised attempts to capitalize on labor disunity.

For the C. I. O. the moral is obvious. "More haste, less speed" is a good summarization. John L. Lewis, watching the affair with ill-concealed perturbation from the sidelines, would be wise to draw that conclusion and act thereon.

Curving Up.

Figures compiled by the Federal Reserve Board, together with other official and unofficial indexes, show conclusively that the month of June saw the first definite upward turn in business activity since the start of the precipitous downward slide nearly a year ago.

The board finds that in June its seasonally adjusted index of industrial production rose to 77 per cent of the 1923-25 average, as against 76 per cent in May. What is far more significant, the current month has seen a considerable acceleration of last month's slight upward trend. And this encouraging development has been reflected in a stiffening of the price level.

The current release of the Bureau of Labor Statistics shows that its index of wholesale commodity prices reached, in the week ended July 16, the highest level attained since late in March. Sharp advances in the prices of farm products and foods led the movement.

Whether the present upward trend is temporary, or is the first stage in a new cyclical movement out of the depression, is still to be demonstrated. But there seems no doubt that natural vitality, plus the Government's pump-priming efforts, have stopped a downward spiral which, during its relatively brief period, was the most acute the country has ever seen.

"What a woman defendant wears in court is not material," rules a Wisconsin judge. Well, very little material, anyway.

"The Greatest Good."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In order to help re-elect his colleague in Senate, Senator Logan, of Kentucky, declined to be a party to a deal whereby he would be named a Federal judge by President Roosevelt in order to pave the way for Gov. Chandler to assume the toga, thus obviating the fight now going on between the Governor and Senator Barkley. Senator Logan, with the assumption of a horrified air, told the public of how he thwarted this sinister attempt to undermine the honor of two eminent statesmen of the Blue Grass.

The American public having knowledge that such arrangements had been made not infrequently in the past, failed to get excited, but was rather inclined to smile at the indignation which surged in the breasts of Messrs. Logan and Barkley. The White House, which was supposed to be involved in the deviltry, issued no ukase of repudiation; only that was needed to mar the affair ridiculous.

Now it appears that a very recent transaction in Texas brings to light a deal that did not die aborning as the other did. It is openly charged in the Lone Star State that in giving the young Gov. Allred a district judgeship President Roosevelt was being gracious to his beloved "old friend" and thick-and-thin supporter, Senator Morris Sheppard. That gentleman is today feeling in high good humor because this "unexpected" promotion of Jimmy Allred, the boy wonder, removes from the scene a likely opponent in the future. The lad was known to covet Senatorial honors, but a present boost to the bench beats a doubtful toga all hollow, and as Jimmy is still young, there's no telling what greatness fate may not bestow on him.

People must be reasonable, must realize that what is grossly improper for one section is right as rain in another; deals that might be dirty in squeamish Kentucky are just bully in free and easy Texas; the greatest good to the greatest number is achieved; all fears have fled from Morris; a bumptious boy has been benched, and only miscreants are left to challenge the motives and purity of the national Administration. "Not 'Pick-a-Back.'"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I can remember as a child—some 75 years ago—my uncles giving me rides on their backs. They would stoop down on the floor and, with their backs to us, we would put our arms around their necks to hold on; they would bring our feet around and hold them. And then we would have a race. What fun it was. Then they would drop us back on a bed which was a real feather bed.

The "pick-a-back" has brought to me many happy recollections, but the original of the term is certainly "piggy-back."

Precedent For U. S.-Mexico Arbitration

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: All citizens of the United States should applaud the sound diplomatic note addressed to the Mexican government by Secretary of State Hull and the supporting statement of Senator Pittman, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, on the subject of expropriation of private property for public uses. It is not only sound international law, but is expressly confirmed by the fifth amendment to the Constitution of the United States.

The instances cited by the Secretary of State of Mexican action in expropriating private property without compensation brings to mind the famous case of the Pious Fund of the Californias which, through the efforts of Secretary John Hay, was arbitrated by the Permanent Court of Arbitration at The Hague in 1902, it having been the first case of that nature brought before that court, and the decision in that case proved satisfactory both to the United States and the Mexican republic.

The Pious Fund comprised donations of money and property by piously inclined persons in Spain and Mexico to the Catholic Church for Christianizing purposes, and in 1842 amounted to a large sum of money. On February 8, 1842, Santa Anna, then provisional president of Mexico, enacted a decree taking from the bishop of California the control and management of the fund, assuming it on the part of the national government. Santa Anna followed up this decree on October 24, 1842, by another which, professing to have in view the more economical administration of the fund (but in reality to obtain funds for military purposes) by capitalizing it and investing the capital in government securities, enacted that the landed property and other assets belonging to the Pious Fund should be incorporated into the national treasury; should be sold and capitalized at a sum which at 6 per cent per annum would produce their then present income, and acknowledging the public treasury indebted to the Pious Fund therefor—binding the nation to pay the interest at 6 per cent per annum on that capital. The revenue from tobacco was specially pledged for the payment of this interest. This decree was subsequently ratified by the Mexican Congress.

Interest was paid to the Catholic Church up to 1848, when it ceased, due no doubt to the Mexican War. In 1868 a mixed claims commission was created between the United States and Mexico to adjust pending claims. To this commission was referred, at the instance of the archbishop of San Francisco, the claim of the church for interest from 1848 to 1868. The United States and the Mexican commissioners disagreeing, the matter was referred to Sir Edward Thornton, the British Ambassador, as umpire, who held that Mexico was liable for annual interest from 1848 to 1868, at $43,050.99 per annum, amounting to the sum of $904,700, Mexican gold. The award was paid by Mexico.

Thereafter, Mexico took the position that the Thornton award closed the case and failed to pay further annual interest. The archbishops of California from time to time renewed the claim for interest, and it 1896 enlisted the services of a very astute lawyer, John T. Doyle, of San Francisco, who associated with him Senator William M. Stewart, of Nevada; Jackson H. Ralston, prominent attorney of Washington, and the writer hereof, with the result that upon the representations made to the Department of State, Secretary Hay succeeded in having President Diaz of Mexico join in a protocol dated May 22, 1902, ratified by the Mexican Senate May 30, 1902, providing for the submission of the claim for interest then due to the Permanent Court of Arbitration at The Hague.

The court opened the hearing in one of the Queen's palaces at The Hague September 15, 1902, and early in November, unanimously awarded a judgment against Mexico for interest from February, 1869, to February, 1902, at $43,050 annually, amounting to the sum of $1,420,682.67, Mexican, together with a perpetual annuity of $43,050, Mexican, thereafter. President Diaz paid the award within eight months after the rendition of judgment.

The precedent for settling amicably all disputes between the United States and Mexico thus established should appeal to President Cardenas. President Diaz invited foreign capital for the development of Mexico and during his regime Mexico became prosperous and the leader of the nations south of us. Is it not possible that by adopting the policies of Diaz, the distressed condition of our neighbor, with whom the United States wants to be on the most friendly terms, would be within a reasonable time immensely improved?

A View Of Mexico.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The cartoon appearing in The Post of July 22, showing a well fed man (Mexico) about to sneak out from Uncle Sam's restaurant without paying for his meal, is a misrepresentation of very obvious facts.

Mexicans have not come to the United States to enrich themselves; it is rather American capitalists who in the course of many years have extracted enormous profits from the oil fields and silver mines of Mexico. In its desire to better the condition of the workers the government passed a law requesting these capitalists to maintain certain working conditions and pay a certain scale of wages. But even after the supreme court of the nation upheld the law, the foreign capitalists refused to comply with it.

Not only were the English and American oil operators obstructing the government in its attempt to raise the living standard of the people but chose to violate the law rather than to have their profits reduced.

Under such circumstances the only step left to the government was to take over these properties, pledging itself to compensate for them. The companies, of course, cried out "robbery" and armed revolution against the government conveniently started just then.

At the same time a general boycott against Mexican oil was engineered which, by depriving the country of its main source of income, has caused economic difficulties and destroyed the ability of the government to compensate for the expropriated property in the near future. Having realized this objective, the recalcitrant capitalists are now forcing their governments to demand immediate payment.

Fair-minded people know that such a demand cannot be made in good faith. G. R.

Drinking And Driving.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: According to an editorial in The Post of July 21, a group called "Repeal Associates" (which is evidently a liquor lobby) claims that booze has less bearing on traffic accidents than before repeal.

It is possible that traffic accidents in the early morning hours on the part of returning party celebrants have diminished, since people now don't seem to feel the need of consuming as much rotten liquor at parties as they did during prohibition when it was the "smart thing to do," but what about the percentage of booze-traffic accidents during the other hours of the day?

How in the world can any organization have the unlimited gall to claim that liquor now is not responsible for a large percentage of accidents, when any person who rides along the highways can see with his own eyes that there is a greater connection than ever between liquor and traffic accidents? There is hardly a mile of public highway left without its quota of blazing liquor signs of every description. Hardly a roadside lunchroom now exists which doesn't brazenly invite the passing motorist to come in and tank up.

Certainly before repeal the conditions were bad enough, but the person then who wanted to drink illegal liquor had to go to a good deal more trouble to get it than under present conditions. The old saloons have returned in greater numbers than ever before and in doing so, they have become more aggressive in their methods than the old corner saloon. They now have fancy names, ritzy locations, swanky fixtures and prices, and by means of extensive advertising they have achieved the appearance of respectability. But in spite of their fancy trimmings they are still the "old corner saloons" in fact and in the products they dispense.

The Post Impressionist

Consultation.

I WAS nursing the aftermath of a seasickness and wishing somebody would dynamite the hell out of Cape Hatteras when the round-faced girl appeared. She fidgeted and twisted around a minute, then blurted:

"There's a man on the ship who says he'd give anything in the world to meet you and . . ."

"Great heavens; what's this?" I cried.

"Well, he isn't exactly a man. He's just a boy. You know, the good looking boy who's a bellman. He wears the tight-fitting white uniform and has red hair. He's real nice and goes to —— College in New York. He goes on the ships in summer to make his way and he wants to be a newspaperman. He says if you would just talk to him he might find how to get a job and would give anything in the world . . ."

I was terribly feeble, and the ship was rolling in what seemed deep troughs, troughs for the deep sea hogs to feed from, for the ship to roll in on misery plunges.

"Can he wait," I said, "until we've reached smooth water . . ."

"He says it won't be smooth any more. It's going to be rough all the way to New York, he says, and he's ready now. He wants to know what to do."

"Gracious God, give me patience," I said, the thought coming to my head from an old show I'd seen.

When she was gone, the boy appeared. He wasn't over 19. His shoulders were too much for the white uniform (which I suspected had been inherited from some preceding bellman) and his jaw was as fixed and square as a town office safe. There was the red hair, too.

"Sir," he said apologetically.

"Don't say 'sir' to me, and sit down so I can save you from your ambition, if it's not too late . . ."

"I'm not permitted to sit down; I just wanted to ask you how I can get into . . ."

"Into trouble," I said. "You want to be a newspaperman; you've been seeing the movies, you've been reading books. You want to wear your hat at an angle and talk from the side of your mouth. You want to come in from the biggest fire of the century and write while a wild man stands above your typewriter, grabbing paragraphs in 'takes' and asking who in hell you think you are, Shakespeare?"

His eyes were fidgety, as if fearful of some officer's brass buttons. "Not that," he said, hurriedly, as if he were paying $10 a word for a talk with me. "I haven't got to go into it. My uncle has a big business. He'd see me through . . ."

"Well, you'd a damn sight better let him do it," I said.

"Why do you people put on a pose," he said, almost sternly. "Why does everyone who works for a paper have to be so cynical about it? If you didn't like it, you wouldn't stay in it. And I know why you stay in it." His voice became very low, as if revealing a trade secret. "You stay there because there's no top in the newspaper business. A newspaperman can climb endlessly. You have. Tell me how you started and what you're doing now."

For ten minutes I talked, and tried to be fair. "Then you just didn't try," he said. "I would try; I'd give it everything I have." The square chin looked like the front rank at West Point.

"What makes you want to be a newspaperman?" I asked him. "If you'll tell me the straight truth, maybe I can say whether you'll fit in."

"I want to write," he said.

"O. K.," I said. "You won't have to be a reporter to do that. You can go in business with your uncle and still write. Newspapers don't teach you to write well. They only want you to write accurately and fast."

"You can't discourage me," he said, stiffly. "Now, take yourself for example . . ."

"The evil example," I said. And feeling ashamed, I asked him what was good for seasickness.

"Oh, sir," he said. "I had it terribly the first day out. And everyone had it terribly. I waited on women and children and men, but of all, a seasick woman is the most impatient. I went to the cabin of one and . . ."

"There," I cried, "you have it! Do a story on seasick women, from the bellman's point of view. Don't try to overwrite it. Tell it the way you talk . . ."

"I'd thought of that, but now I've got a better idea. I'll try and write a piece about you. I can see through you and all your talk . . ."

"Yes, you little rascal, and I'm going to write something about you"

Capital Climate.

Biggest piece of tourist misinformation in the country, according to Curtis Hodges, executive director of the Greater National Capital Committee, is that Washington is hot in summer. Mr. Hodges says it as a base canard. "We're so much cooler than many parts of the Middle West there's no comparison," he says plaintively. "We're a roomy, tree-covered city. But we have to endure a summer slump just because this false impression got started."

Tourists bring around $59,000,000 a year to the Capital and are its biggest source of income, next to the Government pay roll. Visitors who come on Government business account for $10,000,000 of the annual influx, conventions for $12,000,000, and rank-and-file tourists for the rest. Average stay is two days. To the delight of Mr. Hodges the number of visitors seems to be swelling annually. Now if only people would get it out of their heads that Washington is hot in summer, Mr. Hodges would be perfectly happy.

Drinking In The Army.

WALTER S. GIFFIN, a lieutenant colonel in the Army, has been on trial before a military court on a charge of drunkenness and unbecoming conduct. The unbecoming conduct suggested by the testimony does not constitute moral turpitude. At worst he was guilty of the rather foolish behavior of a man with a skinful. The penalty could be dismissal.

PEGLER.

Regardless of the merits of this case, the Army should make it the occasion for revising its code in the direction of honesty and decency by abolishing the regulation which makes an officer a prey to any snitch who considers it his duty to run and tattle when he sees an officer a little too deep in his drams. I have known many good officers and cannot recall that there was a single teetotaler among them.

In fact, I cannot recall offhand any officer of my acquaintance who did not get a little bit high now and again on his own time, and they include all ranks from major general down to second lieuteant. Moreover, if this regulation had been similarly enforced against every officer who ovedrank himself during the World War the good of the service would have been served by the total demoralization of the service and the loss of the victory.

• • • •

IF AN OFFICER is a drunkard that is quite another matter and the facts of the case are better determined by a medical board than by a court. But the mere fact of his being drunk once or on several isolated occasions in the life of a robust man to whom fighting is an occupation should not be made the occasion for a solemn trial. The penalty, barring grievous misconduct dangerous to others, should be no worse than a hangover.

I am discussing, of course, drunkenness on the officer's own time, for it must be agreed that it is not in the best interests of morale and discipline that a commissioned officer fall on his face before his troops while on duty in uniform. But even in such case dismissal from the servive should not be mandatory, because some very good officers do get drunk and their loss to the service for that cause would be a sacrifice for a false standard. After all, the enlisted men know the facts of life.

Everybody in the Army knows that many—I was going to say most—officers get drunk occasionally. They rely on their fellow officers and the wives of the officers to keep still about it, and therein you have dishonesty and a violation of the code of honor, because, strictly speaking, every officer who sees another one even slightly excited from liquor is supposed to tattle, and every patriotic woman of the set is theoretically bound to squeal for the good of the service. The result is a great compromise with honor and duty and a great hypocrisy.

• • • •

NATURALLY, a commanding officer, like any other executive, should police the conduct of his subordinates and should have power to inflict some sort of glorified K. P. on an officer who gets drunk too conspicuously or too often. But this could be done without courts and charges sufficient to break a man's career and deprive the Army of the worth that is in him after the Government has carried him through West Point and trained him up to the rank which he occupies at the time.

The fact that not one case of known drunkenness out of a hundred ever results in charges and trial—a fact which every Army officer will acknowledge—proves that the present system places more value on spite and bad luck than on justice and honor.

And when some desperate wretch comes before a court in deep humiliation to try to save his career or his pension with half-truths, white lies and attacks on the credibility of witnesses who may be veracious enough but too malicious and petty for the fellowship of officers, the probability is that the men across the table who will have to decide his fate are reminding themselves of many a night when they, too, might have been laid by the heels by a snitch.

Whatever their private sentiments they must then pay strict respect to the hypocritical law of the Army and dare not give the accused the benefit of that historic definition offered before Chancellor Nicholson, of Delaware in 1875, that a man is not drunk until he throws himself to the ground and hangs on.

Col. Giffin is a veteran officer who would be eligible for retirement on pension next March, and his dismissal now without his pension for conduct which is an everyday occurrence in the Army would be a cheap evasion of an obligation which is about to mature.

Mr. Roosevelt Studies A Galapagos Tortoise.

(The Galapagos Islands are inhabited chiefly by giant tortoises."—News item.)

Giant tortoise, tell me why
You do not attempt to fly.
Tell me why you stick around,
To your old traditions bound.

Tell me why you always go
Cautiously, and, oh, so slow,
Doing things through all your days
Just because they're tortoise ways.

Tell me why you're, all in all,
Satisfied to sit or crawl—
Why your slogan (what a crime!)
Seems to be, "There's lots of time."

Why, oh, Galapagos turtle,
Do you never leap or hurtle
Through the air with cries impassioned,
Just to show you're not old-fashioned?

As I visit here and see you,
I would surely hate to be you;
Bah! You sit there calmly blinking—
I detest that kind of thinking.

As I watch your ways unhurried,
Seemingly so little worried,
I can't stand your mood or manner . . .
You don't seem a red-hot planner!

Sometimes you are still for hours—
Nothing cheers you, nothing sours;
You've a calm that is terrific . . .
But it's damned unscientific!

Why that shell, that horny casing?
I reject it as disgracing;
Toss it off! It's hard to carry . . .
Then you'll feel so light, so airy!

You've a habit I am checkin'—
Frequently you pull your neck in;
Keep it out, and chin up, ever—
So you'll miss no new trends, never!

Day in, day out, you are quiet—
Centuries without a riot!
You've no tempo quite deranging . . .
Don't your tortoise world need changing?

Corrigan has bought a shillelah in Dublin. But under the government laws he won't be allowed to fly it.

A lot of people, according to H. M. S., are wondering whether they have to pay an occupational tax when the wife puts them in the dog house.

Walter Lippmann

Observer Sees Europe's Economy In Steady Decline As Military Socialism Is Ordered By Governments.

Paris.

FOR THE TIME BEING the tightening of the Anglo-French alliance may be sufficient to prevent an outbreak of violence in the affair of the Czechs and the Sudeten Germans. It may be enough to enable the French and the British to enjoy their vacations during the month of August. But beneath the maneuvers and the accommodations on the surface of events, the tension has not been relieved. It grows worse from month to month. It grows worse because, given the perpetual threat of war and the character of the revolutionary regimes of Central Europe, every government is driven to take a course which makes the ordinary life of the people more difficult and more dangerous.

LIPPMANN.

For nearly 10 years now, that is during the great depression which for Germany began in 1928, the net effect of the whole action of the governments has been to decrease the production of wealth and thus to lower the general standard of life. In the first stages of the depression, say until about 1933, the production of wealth was progressively diminished by all manner of tariffs, quotas, monetary controls, and government induced monopolies. Since 1933, there has been superimposed upon this system of economic constriction, the feverish preparation for war, and the preparation for war has aggravated the constriction.

The total result has been, except perhaps to some degree in England, to cause the government of each of the great powers to take over not only all the new savings of the people but to demand more and more of the income which was used for ordinary living. Today, not only in Russia but in Germany, in Italy and even in France, the governments have pre-empted the capital and an increasing part of the current income of the nation, and are spending this money on armaments, on war industries, and on public works. Thus in Italy, for example, there are magnificent express highways for automobiles. But there are few Italians who have automobiles or can afford to run them. The governments are spending and the people are being impoverished. The governments are not leaving enough money in the hands of the people to renew and improve the tools and the equipment with which wealth is produced; in fact, they are not leaving them enough income to maintain the relatively low standard of life to which they were accustomed.

Governments Described Using National Capitals.

TRAVELERS often ask how it is that these governments are able to spend such enormous sums on armaments, on showy public works and on spectacles. The answer is very simple. They are spending the national capital and they are lowering the standard of life. The military socialism of Europe is paid for not by some new kind of financial magic but by giving the people less food, poorer clothes, poorer houses, less comfort, less educational opportunity, and less travel. It is being paid for out of the accumulations of the past and out of a lowering of the standards of life in the present.

For it is as certain as anything can be that the powers preparing for war are suffering not only from unbalanced government budgets, but from unbalanced national budgets. That is to say that they are not producing enough wealth to pay their way; they are sacrificing the future of their industrial capital and of the standard of life in the current expenditures of their governments.

This is the primary cause, I believe, of the revolutionary tension which grips the peoples and their rulers. Europe is like a crowded room in which the windows and doors are being closed, and the supply of oxygen drawn off. It is harder and harder to breathe, harder and harder to move about. In this atmosphere some grow faint and give up and sit quietly, and others grow frantic and make desperate efforts to escape. The cruelties which men practice toward other men in Europe are like those which occur when crowds are in a panic, and men trample each other under foot in a wild effort to escape.

Heads Of States Can Only Order More Spending.

THE HEADS of states do not really control and, therefore, they do not really lead their peoples. The best they can do is to give them temporary relief by spending some more of their capital or by distracting them with insubstantial triumphs and by deflecting their discontent into hatred against someone else. For with each turn of the screw the preparation for war makes it still more difficult to find a satisfactory solution of the popular discontent. At each turn of the screw, as capital and income are diverted from the production of wealth to the production of military and political power, the people are poorer, the opportunities open to young men are fewer. At each turn of the screw, more oppression is necessary because only greater and greater tyranny can cope with greater and greater discontent.

Though it may be possible by various expedients to avert war, or at least to postpone it, the great crisis of Europe has not yet reached its climax. It might last for some years. It will last and it will grow more and more dangerous as long as the great powers of Europe are compelled by the ambitions of their rulers and the character of their policies to go further and further into military socialism and to impoverish their people in order to magnify the power of the state. Short of war there is no visible end to this crisis until it is overwhelmingly clear that the war which is being prepared cannot be successful and that the cost of preparing for it can no longer be borne.

Second Stage

By Barnet Nover

Germany And The Czech Problem.

IN CERTAIN important particulars there appears to be a distinct and ominous parallel between the Third Reich's course of action with respect to Czechoslovakia and that which had been pursued by the Hitler regime in the case of Austria.

During the period between 1934 and 1938, Nazi Germany's relations with Austria passed through three principal stages. First, in 1934, Hitler sought by a frontal attack to overthrow the regime then governing Austria and replace it by one amenable to his wishes. That effort failed principally because of Mussolini's action in mobilizing a large number of Italian troops on the Brenner.

• • • •

THE SECOND stage was reached two years later. By that time German-Italian relations, considerably disturbed by the attempted Nazi putsch of 1934, had become friendly again. The two dictators found they needed each other. They agreed, therefore, to come to terms with regard to the one problem which more than any other stood in the way of their friendship—Austria.

In June, 1936, Germany and Austria, with Italy's blessing, made a treaty in which the former acknowledged Austria's sovereignty and independence and the latter admitted that it was a "German state." At Mussolini's behest, or at least without any objection on the Duce's part, Chancellor Schuschnigg agreed to moderate his government's campaign against the Austrian Nazis.

• • • •

FOR A YEAR and a half, therefore, Hitler took no action destructive of Austria's independence. He could afford to observe the committments of the 1936 pact. As long as Italy was strong enough effectively to oppost Austro-German Anschluss, a frontal attack by Germany on Austria was dangerous anyway. On the other hand, by making a virtue of necessity, Hitler secured the support of Mussolini. And, as all the world knows, when the time was ripe for a new direct thrust on Austria's independence, the solemn pledges embodied in the 1936 treaty were completely ignored.

• • • •

TWO MONTHS ago Czechoslovakia found itself faced by a situation broadly parallel to that faced by Austria in 1934. A violent German press campaign against the Prague regime suggested the possibility of a frontal attack on Czechoslovakia's independence. The attack did not come off.

Nazi newspapers insist that no plan to invade Czechoslovakia had ever been formulated by the Third Reich. But whether this is so or not the fact cannot be minimized that Czechoslovakia's speedy and efficient mobilization on the night of May 21-22 made it clear to Berlin that, for the time being, forcible measures against the little republic's independence would meet with stern resistance by the Czechs themselves. Representations made by the British and French governments also indicated that if compelled to defend herself Czechosolvakia would not be without allies.

Last week saw a sudden change of front on Hitler's part. Through his aide de camp, Capt. Fritz Wiedemann, the Fuehrer informed the British government that he was eager to bring about an improvement in Anglo-German relations and a "non-violent" solution of the Czech problem.

• • • •

THE TIMING of this demarche was significant. It came on the eve of King George's visit to Paris and also on the eve of the expected publication by the Prague government of its new minorities statute.

The presumption is, therefore, that it was designed for a double purpose. First, it was probably intended to be a manifestation of the Third Reich's peacemindedness at a time when, if the impression continued to prevail in London and Paris that Germany was bent on aggression the Anglo-French alliance would be tightened. Secondly, the demarche in London probably had in mind using Great Britain as a lever to extract concessions from Prague which the Czech government might on its own account be loath to grant.

• • • •

THE BRITISH are quite eager to have Czechoslovakia make such concessions as would satisfy the Reich and thus bring about a period of peace in Central Europe. Unwilling to become embroiled in war because of Czechoslovakia, they are willing to accept Hitler's olive branch at its face value. And since Czechoslovakia, too, wants peace the way would seem to be open for a settlement of the dispute over the Sudeten Germans and their place in the Czechoslovak republic.

The fly in the ointment is that Hitler's change of front on the Czechoslovak question does not necessarily mean a change of heart. Indeed, the reports that his plan for a "non-violent" solution of that question involves joint action by four powers—Germany, Italy, Great Britain and France—with Czechoslovakia and Russia excluded—and also a reduction in Czech armaments suggests that while willing to forego, at this moment, a frontal attack on the little republic, his underlying aim may be to pave the way for such action at some favorable time in the future.

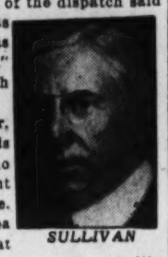
This impression is strengthened by the specific demands made by Henlein. If all the Sudeten Germans were after was the protection of their minority rights and the elimination of discriminations practiced against them in the past, they could have such concessions and more from the Prague government. But what they are actually demanding is the establishment in Czechoslovakia of a regime that would further Germany's expansionist aims. But such demands the Czech leaders are unwilling to grant.

Insofar, however, as the Prague may, through British pressure be compelled to give way further than Czech statesmen are willing to go, Hitler, at no cost to Germany, since she is unprepared for a general war, will gain concessions that may make it easier to draw Czechoslovakia into the German orbit. In other words the technique that was so successfully applied in the case of Austria is being employed with respect to the much more difficult problem of Czechoslovakia.

Mark Sullivan

Commentator Sees Moral For President To Ponder In Success Of O'Daniel's Platform Of "Businessmen And Smokestacks."

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS, in the opening words of its dispatch about the Texas election, described the sensationally successful candidate for Governor as "an Irishman with a hill-billy band." But, after several hundred words of detail, the closing words of the dispatch said something more, and quite different: "O'Daniel has been successful with his flour business and has headed the Fort Worth Chamber of Commerce." One hopes that readers read more of that dispatch than the opening words.



SULLIVAN

As Will Rogers used to say, all I know about Mr. O'Daniel is what I read in the newspapers about his remarkable emergence in public life. But all who try to understand the strange trends of current politics ought to learn more about this new figure. We ought to learn more, not merely with the idea that Mr. O'Daniel is important personally, or that he may be a coming man. That may be or may not be. The personality of Mr. O'Daniel is less important than another aspect of his emergence.

We ought to learn more about Mr. O'Daniel in order to know what was in the minds of the people who gave him the extraordinary vote he got. Just what led the people to prefer this newcomer—newcomer in politics and newcomer in Texas—over rivals experienced in politics, one a State railroad commissioner, another the State attorney general? What is in the minds of the people who vote for a man is one phenomenon. The personality of the man is another phenomenon. The first is as desirable to understand as the second. It takes both the actor and the audience to make the whole show. This truism ought to be considered by those who devote much time, without great success, to trying to understand President Roosevelt—and fail to give enough thought to the people who come to Mr. Roosevelt's show, and the reasons why they come.

Music On Stump No New Strategy.

THE EMPHASIS on Candidate O'Daniel's "hill-billy" band could easily mislead. To use music to allure crowds to political meetings is one of the oldest arts in America. For this purpose a "hill-billy" band does not necessarily differ from a brass one, except that the latter is long familiar, the former more in tune with a modern vogue.

Neither does it matter whether Mr. O'Daniel ran for Governor on the theory that, win or lose, the advertising would be good for his flour business. That, too, has been done before. What we are after is not the motive that was in Mr. O'Daniel's mind, but the mood that was in the minds of the people who voted for him.

Mr. O'Daniel's two-term headship of the Fort Worth Chamber of Commerce would ordinarily label him—and damn him—as conservative. To the New Deal, "Chamber of Commerce" is the equivalent of "Tory," "reactionary," "economic royalist." In Washington the big marble building of the United States Chamber of Commerce is the political dog-house. Are we to infer that the New Deal bans of excommunication are not respected in Texas?

Mr. O'Daniel is said to have advocated a pension of $30 a month for everybody over 65. That is conservative—and I do not use the word in irony. In making his figure so low Mr. O'Daniel was distinctly conservative and also courageous. I doubt if any candidate anywhere who has used the "old age pension" promise has made his figure so low. The figure of the Townsendites who started the idea was $200 a month. Most candidates who use the old age pension plan either promise the Townsend amount or use language vaguely adapted to create that impression. In Oklahoma the candidate for the Democratic Senatorial nomination who ran second was, as I recall, going to out-Townsend Townsend. Mr. O'Daniel's $30 a month might be practicable. It is no more than the existing social security act promises and will probably give. (Whether each of those future social security dollars will buy as much as the present dollars which the people pay into the fund—that is a matter too distant to discuss.)

Reaction Indicated Against Politicians.

ONE OF Mr. O'Daniel's pledges he put in a phraseology that read: "Less Johnson grass and politicians, more smokestacks and business men." What "Johnson grass" is, I do not know—I presume it is some vegetable equivalent of the boll-weevil, the grasshopper or the Japanese beetle. But I know, and everybody knows, what "less politicians" means. If the promise to exterminate this variety of bane appealed to the Texas voters, and if voters elsewhere feel the same way, then we may have come to a turn in the road. The Old Guard Republican politicians are already rejected and gone. Practically all the present politicians are the New Deal ones, and if the people are fed up with them, there may be something new and wholesome ahead.

Kin to Mr. O'Daniel's promise to taboo politicians is his promise of "more smokestacks and business men." an advisory committee of business men for the Governor, and the industrialization of Texas. If that program appeals to the people of Texas, it points toward something which, whatever it may turn out to be, is not the New Deal.

But what we really need is for some writer or other person in Texas who can see beneath the surface to tell us, carefully and accurately, just what it was in the minds of the Texas voters that led them to elect as Governor the extraordinary figure so new to politics that he had never paid a poll tax. Such a writer would find many readers, of whom the most intent would be a gentleman now fishing off the Galapagos Islands. Mr. Roosevelt will do a good deal of thinking about what has happened in Texas.

The Federal Diary

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

Here is how Civil Service President Harry B. Mitchell answered some questoins about the executive orders of June 24, during a meeting of A. F. G. E. members the other night:

Q. Will employes, who acquire a competitive classified civil service status under the provisions of the June 24 executive orders have the same opportunity and status for transfer to other competitive classified civil service positions as employes who have come into the competitive classified civil service through open competitive examinations?

A. Employes who acquire a classified status under the provisions of the executive order are in exactly the same position as employes who secure a status through examination and certification. They can be transferred to other competitive classified civil service positions; they can be promoted to higher positions for which they are qualified.

Q. What type of in-service training program may be inaugurated and is it intended that such program shall be under the general supervision of the Civil Service Commission?

A. The answer to this question must be indefinite. The order provided that the Civil Service Commission "shall," in co-operation with the operating departments and establishments, the Office of Education and private institutions of learning, establish "practical training courses." Therefore, the commission can only answer after getting the views of those others interested. In view of the use of the word "practical," I venture to suggest that the courses would have to do with the work in which the particular employe is engaged. It its quite clearly intended that any training program would be under the general supervision of the Civil Service Commission.

Q. What additional benefits accrue to employes under the changes in the rule affecting removals and reductions?

A. The new rule grants to the commission power to decide whether employes removed for cause should be considered for reinstatement under different working conditions in agencies other than those from which they were removed and, if so, to certify such as are in fact qualified for such reinstatement. At present the commission has no authority to investigate any removal or reduction unless it is alleged, with offer of proof, that the procedure required was not followed or that the removal was made for political or religious reasons. There are no changes so far as reductions of force are concerned.

Q. Does either of the Executive orders of June 24 provide for an appellate procedure whereby employe grievances may be given appellate consideration?

A. That depends upon what is meant by appellate procedure. The Executive order provides that, subject to the approval of the head of any departm it or establishment and of the Civil Service Commission, the head of the division of personnel in each department or establishment "shall establish means for the hearing of grievances of employes and present appropriate recommendations for the settlement thereof to the head of his department or establishment." The word "shall" seems to indicate something must be done about it, but that the plan must have the approval of the head of the particular governmental agency and of the Civil Service Commission. There is no provision for an appeal beyond the head of the department or establishment. What method of hearing and considering grievances will be finally agreed upon remains for future consideration.

Q. Regarding the extension of the probationary period to one year, is it reasonable to assume that during such probationary period an employe might be given an opportunity to make good on more than one assignment of comparable difficulty?

A. The civil service law requires that there be a period of probation served in the job to which originally appointed before assignment to another job. The new rules provide for one-year probation, unless the commission provides for a shorter period, not less than six months in some cases. The new rule further provides that efficiency rating reports of all probationers shall be periodically filed with the commission as it may direct. At any time after one month the probationer may be separated if his work is not satisfactory. However, a probationer separated from the service without delinquency or misconduct may be restored to the register and recertified to another department.

Q. Will employes, who acquire a competitive classified civil service status under the provisions of the Executive orders become subject to the provisions of the civil service retirement act?

R. Yes. These employes will come under the provisions of the civil service retirement system. They may also get credit under the civil service retirement law for service previously rendered in the Government servcie.

German Plane Catapulted Off On Return Hop

Port Washington, N. Y., July 25 (AP).—The German flying boat Nordmeer was catapulted from its mother ship Friesenland at 6 p. m. today on the return journey of its round trip between the Azores and the United States.

Riding at anchor nearby was Nordmeer's sister ship, Nordwind, which alighted on Long Island Sound at 1:35 p. m., completing Germany's second transatlantic flight since Friday, when the Nordmeer arrived.

The Nordmeer's take-off was 10½ hours after the British pick-a-back plane Mercury set out for Montreal to return to Southampton by easy stages across the Atlantic. The Mercury arrived at Botwood, Newfoundland, and is ready for its overseas hop tomorrow.

Movies On The Wane?

Example Of Snow White.

IT HAS BEEN predicted that the inanimate motion picture stars like Mickey Mouse, Donald Duck, Betty Boop, and Popeye will eventually supplant the animate flesh-and-blood stars. I just don't believe this, certainly not as regards lady flesh-and-blood stars. Charlie McCarthy may supplant George Arliss in time, but Snow White will never take the place of Carole Lombard.

They have been saying that the motion picture as a form of art is on the wane, some of the more virulent critics even going so far as to maintain that it was never on the wax. Nonsense. No form of art that can produce a phenomenon as boisterous as bank night is on the wane. No form of art is to be sneered at that can relegate the New Deal to the background in dinner conversations, as "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" did last winter. No hostess had any cause for worry when the conversation lagged. All she had to do was introduce Snow White:

"Did you like Snow White?"

"Well, I did and I didn't."

"You didn't like it? Oh, I thought it was charming."

"I liked parts of it. I loved the animals. Disney does them so well. But I didn't like the dwarfs."

"You didn't like Dopey?"

"Ye-es, I liked him. I guess it must be me. Everybody else seemed to like the picture so much."

And so on, until somebody down the table thinks of a new name to call the President.

Earle Asks Laws To Balk Graft Quiz

the charges were made by Margiotti while he was attorney general and a candidate for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in the primary last May. Earle dismissed him after a row in which Earle demanded Margiotti's evidence and Margiotti insisted it should be given a grand jury.

To the joint session of the Legislature, assembled in the hall of the House, and over a radio network, Pennsylvania's first Democratic Governor in 44 years declared:

"I have convened your honorable body in extraordinary session to repel an unprecedented judicial invasion of the executive and legislative branches of the government."

Action Unprecedented.

"In all the 300 years of this State's history, no such action has ever before succeeded. Time and again the courts have consistently respected the constitutional provision under which our State government is divided into three co-ordinate branches—executive, legislative and judicial—none of which is subject to domination or control by the other.

"Now, by its present action, the judiciary has made a scrap of paper of the constitution and its own prior decisions."

Earle said the situation was comparable to that should "any United States attorney" launch a grand jury investigation of the official conduct of the President of the United States and his Cabinet.

"I will not permit the establishment of a precedent which will place every Governor who succeeds me under the thumb of the judiciary," he said, "and under the inquisition of any district attorney of any county who may find it politically expedient to drum up charges against the head of the government."

"Open" Quiz Rushed.

Representative Joseph Simon, of Clinton County, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, said during the Democratic caucus tonight that the administration expected to set up a commission for an "open" investigation within a week.

The Democrats control both branches—the House, 152 to 54; the Senate, 34 to 16—a bare two-thirds majority.

Besides the question of the grand jury investigation, the Legislature will consider 24 additional subjects, including relief, rehabilitation of the anthracite industry, funds for the east-west turnpike across the State and revival of the oil investigating commission, once invalidated by the State Supreme Court.

'Happy' Chandler A Poison Victim

"I am aware that hundreds of other people drank the water which is piped into the hotel and suffered no ill effects therefrom," the doctor added.

Dr. Bryan said he was "fully convinced that had Gov. Chandler consumed very much more of the water, which undoubtedly had been poisoned, it would have been fatal to him."

He said he was convinced by the "pathology, the history and findings of Dr. Weeter (Dr. Harry Weeter, of Louisville), the technician, that Mr. Talbott and Gov. Chandler drank water which contained the poison which would produce the cyanotic condition and if consumed in sufficient quantities would have caused death."

He said he was of "the absolute opinion that somehow and in some way the water which was consumed by Gov. Chandler, Mr. Talbott and Lieut. Wyatt, somehow, somewhere and by someone had been doctored with a poison that would have produced the above symptoms complained of by the three men.'

The Governor did not comment on the statement.

Dr. C. W. Dowden, Louisville physician who was called in on the case Friday, said he "never heard of any suspicion" of poisoning in the case. He said he had "no opinion or theory" but added that "any man who has a pain in the stomach might have been poisoned."

Dr. Weeter said no connection he had with the case gave any suspicion of poisoning He said he made the usual laboratory test—blood count and urine analysis—and that "it did not show anything one way or the other."

No Surplus Honey In U.S., Agriculture Department Says

The Agriculture Department received sweet news yesterday: There is no surplus of honey.

Officials said a check-up on supplies showed that virtually all the 1937 crop had been consumed. This put honey in the class of a very few farm commodities.

Honey producers no longer must depend on a breakfast table market. Large quantities of honey are now used in making golf balls, shaving cream, in curing hams and tobacco pipes and in making cosmetics, candles, polishes and insulation.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Young Man Tells Story of His 'Dating' Experiences With Local Girls; Finds Them Calculating.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a bachelor reader of your column and I am not asking for advice. My idea is to set down a few of my social experiences with the fair sex in Washington, in the hope that some of your young lady readers may profit from same. I am 25 years old and a college graduate. For three years (since graduation) I have been employed by one firm here in Washington and through diligent application have worked myself up to a fairly responsible position.

* * * *

In connection with my work I get sent out of town, all expenses paid, about three times a year, on some very interesting trips. Though I started at a pitifully small salary, it has been progressively raised (along with increased responsibility) at the rate of about $50 a month, or $600 a year, for each successive year, and there is every indication that if I continue to behave myself and do my work that this advancement will be automatic.

* * * *

Intertwined with my professional responsibilities, I have a number of fraternal, club, committee and business affiliations, which demand about four evenings a week. Time and again it has been demonstrated to me that the contacts and friendships I make at these meetings are a factor—and an important one—in the advancement of my career. Is it any wonder, therefore, that I have determined to keep up my interest in and attendance at these meetings, even though it seems to have created a social situation that causes me some embarrassment in my strictly private life?

The facts are these: I have a friendly "dating" acquaintance with about 15 different young ladies in town. Four evenings a week devoted to men's activities leaves me three evenings a week, at most, for dates. And three dates a week, distributed among 15 girls, means that I get around to a given girl not oftener than once a month at most. Sometimes the interval is longer, as my family home is within driving distance of Washington and I go there frequently of week-ends, thus decreasing the number of evenings given to "dates."

* * * *

The net result of this set-up is that when some of these girls accept a date with me, I often feel they are doing so with reservations; with the idea in mind that if something better comes along at the last minute, they will let me down for the reason that I scarcely come under the head of a serious contender for their hand and heart. This has actually happened a number of times. I have a good many married friends of all ages who invite me for an evening's visit with them, or to join them at a night club or show, it being understood that I am to bring along a girl.

* * * *

Well, the date is made, and yet I never know where I stand until I actually see the girl in person on the evening designated. These dates are always made several days in advance, and frequently, in telephoning later to confirm the engagement and say what time I will be around, the girl says she'll not be able to keep it because her grandmother is ill or she has to go to choir rehearsal. Result: I show up at the appointed place without the girl, giving some flimsy excuse. I never try to make another date, because I believe in showing any woman the deference of calling her well in advance of a proposed engagement.

* * * *

There is a type of girl who always wants to know, in advance of accepting an invitation, what entertainment is planned. Thereafter, the proposal is compared with subsequent offers and the date either kept or broken, according to whether something better turns up. I have actually had the distasteful experience of calling a girl and having her refuse at first, only to reverse her decision when she found out what was planned for the evening. The idea of having money spent on her seemed to be very appealing. I could hardly keep the date.

* * * *

I feel safe in saying that these broken dates are not based on objections to me as a person. I come of a good family, had a proper upbringing, and am well received by all my friends. I hold office in three organizations, which seems to indicate that my personality is not negative; and these very girls who turn down one date, often accept another date, and afterward tell me how much they have enjoyed the evening and my company . . .

* * * *

In order to prove my case against these self-seeking ladies, who are greatly in the majority, let me state that I am so fortunate as to know two girls who never break a date once made. They are very popular and have dates nearly every night, and their honorable dealings no doubt has a lot to do with their popularity. (On the other hand, the chronic "date breakers" have just a few dates here and there, and, therefore, I suppose, have to make the most of their occasional social opportunities.) As for the two girls cited above, you can suggest a date with them days ahead, and if they have no previous engagements, they promptly accept, without snooping around to find out what is in the air. Incidentally, they are good looking, smart, know how to dress and are interesting conversationalists. When you make a date with them, you know it will be kept, whether it has been one week or six weeks since you have last seen them.

* * * *

During the evening, one is made to feel by their actions that they are genuinely appreciative of your favors. Apparently their method is to keep every date once made, to have a good time themselves no matter where they are taken, and to see that their escort gets some attention . . . And so there is recorded both sides of my illuminating experiences with women in Washington. I do not ask for advice, as I mean to continue keeping my career foremost for the present, at least. But I intend this as a pointer to girls who are in the habit of breaking dates when they see a chance of doing a little better; and a pat on the back for those who conduct their affairs more ethically. Maybe this will throw some light on the problem of those girls who are forever wailing that they can't get enough dates to keep them happy.

ANNOYED BACHELOR.

Interesting Reaction.

DEAR ANNOYED BACHELOR: I am sure that young lady readers of this column will find your letter interesting, if only as a study in masculine reaction. But I doubt that they will create much of a storm of protest over your treatment at the hands of the 13 so-called "self-seeking" young ladies on your list of acquaintances. After all, it is not in the cards for an eligible bachelor to divide his attentions among 15 young ladies and meet with a consistently cordial reception from all of them; just as it would be impossible for a girl to try to distribute her favors among 15 young men and make much headway with any of them.

* * * *

As a general rule, with casual acquaintances it is a case of being "out of sight, out of mind;" and even in instances where there exists the possibility of a deeper feeling being aroused, regular and prolonged intervals of absence are calculated to make the heart grow fonder of someone else. I am inclined to believe that these young ladies who back down on their engagements with you do so because some unexpected, last-minute opportunity crops up for seeing another chap whose more diligent, if less precise, attentions makes him a preferable companion.

* * * *

Also, if these young ladies who see all too little of you are insistent on knowing what is being planned before committing themselves to an engagement, it may be because they regard you less as a person than as a sort of disembodied social opportunity. If you plan to take them where they can see and be seen, and possibly meet a matrimonially-minded man, they are willing to spend an evening on (or with) you. But if you, who are definitely out of the running so far as marriage is concerned, can't afford them that extra break, so to speak, they probably see no reason why they should be bothered. However, I shall be greatly interested in hearing what the young ladies themselves have to say by way of explanation or extenuation.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

New York, July 25.

AS FOUNDER and first president of the Let's-Forget-About-Barbara-Hutton League, it may be out of order for me to bring this up, but the stupendous fact remains that local reporters have been polling wise and world-worn debutantes of 18 and 19 around our smarter nibble-and-sip spots on the situation.

ALICE HUGHES.

These clever old women-around-the-Stork Club are almost unanimous in feeling that Princess Baba has pulled grievous boners in her personal life, if she may be said to have such a thing. Let me quote from the opinion of Miss Esme O'Brien, the cute chick who succeeded to the 1937-38 Glamour Girl Tiara when Gloria Baker set off on a world tour. "I think Barbara should come back home, marry an American man, and stay here. Her money was made here, and it belongs here."

Miss Esme is just one of the Kaviar Kids polled on the question. Remember that all these girls are ten years younger than the five-and-dime queen, with their mistakes yet to make in the world of international amour and scrambled finance. It is so easy to be smart at 18! Oddly enough, nearly all the babes probed seemed particularly interested in the destination of the Woolworth dough, being almost unanimous in the notion that it belongs right where it first came over those countless counters. Goodness alive! are our kiddies so crass? Certainly they wouldn't mind a handsome, imperious Dane having a modest hunk.

* * * *

But they agreed, in toto, on the thought that an American girl, in bright blue chips, should have an American husband — which at least lets us hope that an orgy of dubious title-buying which made the nineties so disgusting will not be seen again—well, at least in the near future!

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—In all the welter of memorial concerts and broadcasts which commemorated the first anniversary of George Gershwin's lamented death, one thought smacked many of us—and that is that these fancy arrangers and orchestrators are practically ruining most of George's pieces. Gershwin was primarily a brilliant tune-writer—and now the fancy dans, in their effort to make a super-colossal musician out of him, have arranged many of his best songs to death. It was almost impossible to find some of his loveliest melodies in the noises made at the great concert here in his memory, and if these people don't stop monkeying around with good, honest songs we'll send them to bed without their grace-notes!

Reducers Have Ups and Downs, Should Not Be Discouraged

By Ida Jean Kain.

REDUCERS have their ups and downs. You lose for a time, and then, on the same diet, your weight will remain unchanged. If you began reducing this spring, you may have reached now the point where it looks as though you will never lose again, but do not let this aggravating phenomenon surprise or discourage you. It is entirely normal.

Continue to follow the low calorie menus as closely as you can, and keep up your exercises. There is no other time in your figure program when exercise is so important. During the time you cannot lose weight, it will help you to lose inches and will, moreover, build the firm muscle tissue that stabilizes weight already lost. In the summer it is a good idea to exercise in the cool of the morning. Overweights should avoid too vigorous exercise in the hot part of the day, for exercise produces heat and fat hinders the loss of heat from the body.

This present standstill may be only one of several encountered in your reducing program. With most people, the first 10 or so excess pounds come off fairly fast. There are several reasons for this, but the principal one is the ease with which the soft fat is converted into energy. When you begin dealing with compact fat, the process slows up, and for this very reason the overweight whose fat is all of the compact type has a hard time from the first.

Another scientific explanation of this weight standstill is that you are probably not using as many calories as you did. After several weeks on a diet the energy requirements of the reducer are, to some extent, adjusted to a lower food intake. There is not such a great difference between your food requirements and your food intake, and you do not lose as rapidly on the same low calorie diet.

Explanation Given.

Your reduced weight is still another factor in your apparent inability to lose. You are using the same number of calories per pound body weight, but you have lost some of those pounds. Fat burns very few calories and the decrease in your expenditure may be slight, but still enough to prevent your losing.

Before you become too disgusted, you can start your weight on the downgrade again with the fruit and vegetable regime. This regime is especially easy to follow in the summer, and it contains less than 800 calories—all in minerals, vitamins and carbohydrates. It is entirely lacking in fat and protein and contains very little starch—you can't help losing on it. Follow the menu for two consecutive days this week, and, if necessary, again next week.

REDUCER'S MAYONNAISE
2 egg yolks
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1½ cups mineral oil

Add the salt to the egg yolk, blend thoroughly. Add the lemon juice. Then add the oil in quantities of a tablespoon or more, being sure that all the oil has completely combined with the egg yolks before more is added. Continue beating all the time with rotary beater. Toward the last larger quantities of the oil may be added at a time. Have all ingredients cold. If a more acid dressing is desired, add more lemon juice or add the juices from several pickles.

Use purified mineral oil—heavy oil is best. This has no nutritive value and is also laxative.

THE GENTLER SEX—

By Malvina Lindsay

Slapping 'Em Down.

"Are you going to get that radio fixed today?"

"Yes, I'm going to call up the man this morning."

"Well, for Heaven's sake talk up to 'em this time. Tell 'em they've either got to make it work or take it back. Tell 'em it wasn't worth a darn in the first place. Tell 'em——"

"All right. I'll really talk plain to them."

"No you won't! I know you! I'm wasting my time to tell you what to say."

"No, really, I'll be hard-boiled."

"Hard-boiled nothing; I can just hear you say 'Oh, really, I'm so sorry to bother you——'"

"Well, why don't you call them up then?"

"I haven't time. I can't bother with such things. Anyway, if you had any spunk——"

"Well, when the man comes I'll tell him——"

"Tell him nothing! The thing to do is to walk right to that phone, call 'em up and say, 'Now look here, gentlemen——'"

"How can I say 'gentlemen' when I'm only talking to one man?"

"All right then, just say, "Now look here, sir, I want to know WHAT you're going to do about my radio. I'm sick and tired of this thing of never getting a station I want! I'm sick and tired of all this static! I'm sick and tired——'"

"All right. I'll tell him all that."

"Just ask him—— Just say, 'Gentlemen, I just want you to tell me the truth. Is my radio any good or not I just want you to tell me as a matter of information whether it's a pile of junk or not."

"I can't say that."

"Why can't you? You could if you had any guts. Just say to 'em, 'Gentlemen, another thing I'd like to know is, have you really got any radio mechanic on your staff who knows enough to fix my radio?' Tell 'em if they havn't you just want to know, so you can throw the whole thing out the window."

("All right, I'll tell 'em."

"Oh, no, you're not going to tell 'em that. I know you. You're too mealy mouthed."

"Well, you can't insult people."

"I'm not asking you to insult 'em. I'm just asking you to talk plain. I tell you those fellows don't understand any other language. It's fool women like you——"

"Well, I'm going to be very emphatic about it."

"Yes, you are. You'll just go around bowing and scraping and saying, 'Yes, Mr. So and So,' and 'That's right, Mr. So and So.' Say, how far would I get in my business if I talked to people that way? You just ought to hear me at my office. I tell 'em!"

"Well, a man's different—wait, there's the telephone . . . Hello . . . yes, he's here . . . Here, George—— it's some garage man. He said you left a call."

"Hello . . . Benson? . . . Say, Benson, you know that spark plug your man put in yesterday? . . . Well, it's gone dead . . . No, the car won't budge . . . Say, Benson, the fellow promised me——What? . . . Drunk? . . . You fired him? . . . Yes, I know those fellows are . . . Well, that's too bad . . . Well, can you send someone over today, Benson? . . . You are? . . . Yes, I know you're rushed . . . Well, tomorrow morning? . . . No, well you see I really need the car . . . Tomorrow afternoon? . . . We-l-l, all right . . . Yes, I see . . . Oh, no; don't pull yourself out, Benson . . . Oh, no, that's all right, Benson . . . that's all right . . ."

Diplomatic Corps Out in Gold Braid At Capital Rites for Late Queen Marie

Secretary Hull Leads U. S. Representatives at Gathering as Distinguished as Any Ever Assembled Here in the Summer.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

As distinguished a group of Washington residents as has ever assembled here in midsummer stood in Bethlehem Chapel, Washington Cathedral, yesterday afternoon to participate in the memorial service for Her Majesty, Queen Marie of Rumania.

Canon Anson Phelps Stokes officiated at the brief, formal service that included several numbers from the vested choir. Four years ago a similar ceremony took place in the same setting when Canon Stokes conducted a memorial ritual for Rumania's late cabinet minister, Jan Duca, whose son, George Duca, attended the service for Queen Marie.

HOPE R. MILLER.

Before the altar yesterday, the flag-draped catafalque was banked with blossoms—gladioli, roses, larkspur—carrying out Rumania's colors, blue, gold and yellow. Four white tapers in tall, silver stands flanked the catafalque and cast a soft glow on the huge bouquets of Easter lilies and wreathes massed around. Prominently displayed in the floral layout was a wreath of lilies and red gladioli sent by Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

The Rumanian Minister, Radu Irimescu, and Mme. Irimescu, who returned to Washington from a northern vacation in order to attend the service, arrived at Bethlehem Chapel early, accompanied by other members of the Rumanian Legation, including Mr. Duca, the Second Secretary; Laurence Bungardeanu, attache, and Emanuel H. Dimitriu, financial counselor, and Mme. Dimitriu.

Minister Iremescu, as well as other members of the Diplomatic Corps, were in either uniform or formal afternoon dress. Black-bordered cards sent out within the past few days had specified "uniform," so glittering gold braid, plumed hats and ribbons were very much in evidence.

Secretary Hull Leads Line of Diplomats

The feminine contingent held to no special type of dress. Some wore black, others white and still others frocks of every shade and style. Although Her Majesty, Queen Marie, said she hoped lilac or violet would be worn as mourning for her, only a scattering of lilac ensembles were in the crowd. The Queen's favorite color, however, was noted in the shade of Canon Stokes' robe, and the cassocks of the choir boys, both Mme. Irimescu and Mme. Dimitriu were in all-black costumes.

Following the service and Chopin's funeral march, the clergy and choir slowly walked down the aisle and left the chapel. Next came the Rumanian Minister and Mme. Irimescu, who proceeded to the rear of the chapel and stood before the evergreen-covered cross to greet other members of the Diplomatic Corps as they departed.

Leading the long line of distinguished Government representatives was Secretary of State Hull, accompanied by Clement Dunn, adviser on political relations for the State Department. Then, strictly according to their listing in the Diplomatic Blue Book, came envoys of scores of foreign countries, headed by the Dean of the Diplomatic Corps, the British Ambassador, Sir Ronald Lindsay.

Others glimpsed in the group were the Turkish Ambassador, Mehmet Munir Ertegun, accompanied by Mme. Ertegun; the Belgian Ambassador, Count Robert van der Straten-Ponthoz; the Counselor of the Polish Embassy, Witold Wankowicz; the Italian Ambassador, Fulvio de Suvich; the Spanish Ambassador, Dr. Fernando de los Rios.

French Envoy In Full Uniform

Also, the French Ambassador, Count de Saint-Quentin, making his first appearance in uniform here. He was accompanied by the Counselor of the French Embassy, Jacques Truelle. The Minister Counselor of the Cuban Embassy, Dr. Jose T. Baron, was there, as were the Counselor of the German Embassy, Dr. Hans Thomsen; the Charge d'Affaires of the Brazilian Embassy, Joaquim de Sousa Leao; the Minister of Sweden, Wollmar Bostrom; the Minister of Denmark, Otto Wadsted and Mme. Wadsted; Joao de Deus Ramos, of the Legation of Portugal; Baron Paul Schell, of the Hungarian Legation; B. Kleijn Molekamp, of the Netherlands Legation, accompanied by Mme. Molekamp; Dr. Vladimir Rybar, of the Yugoslav Legation.

The Minister of the Union of South Africa was glimpsed in the line; also, the Canadian Minister and Lady Marler; the Counselor of the Norwegian Legation, Jorgen Galbe and Mme. Galbe; the Secretary of the Legation of Finland, Dr. Sigurd von Numers and Mme. von Numers, and many more.

Others in the formal line leaving the chapel before the rank and file moved out were the Chief of Naval Operations, Admiral William D. Leahy, and Mrs. Leahy; Maj. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, commandant of the Marine Corps, and Mrs. Holcomb, and Mrs. Woodrow Wilson.

Social and Sartorial Splendor Brighten Opening at Saratoga

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., July 25.—Weather may have been unkind to picnics and outings in other parts of the United States today, but the sun shone at Saratoga where the summer racing season opened in a blaze of glory—sartorial as well as social.

One of the most simply dressed women, however, was young Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's bride, the former Manuela Hudson, of California, who sat with him in a box near the finish line.

Pretty Mrs. Vanderbilt, whose husband is heir to $20,000,000, wore a dark blue crepe sports dress, fawn-colored flowers and matching straw hat that showed her tawny brown hair.

She and Vanderbilt flew to Saratoga, and are seeing the races minus a house party. When the bugle blew "boots and saddles" they were at the paddock, watching Vanderbilt's horse Jingoist saddled. Vanderbilt had four horses in the day's events. They watched quietly, both with their field glasses trained on the track.

John Hay "Jock" Whitney, owner of some of the largest race strings here, chatted with them in their box.

A man who came in a hired carriage drew up to the club house entrance saying, "If you couldn't ride up in a carriage it wouldn't be Saratoga."

A score of parties lunched at tables on the terrace, overlooking the infield with its lake and its famous two swans. But in line with Saratoga tradition it was mid-afternoon before the boxes filled.

Mrs. Dodge Sloane, owner of Cavalcade, was one of many who went straight to the paddock. She wore a print dress, mauve on a dark blue ground, and a little white hat made of flower petals. She was accompanied by Mrs. Morton Schwartz, wife of another horse owner, and her first words were, "How many scratches are there?"

Mrs. Sloane and her party, which included Herbert Bayard Swope, a member of the State Racing Commission, came by private car.

George H. Bull, head of the Saratoga Association for the Improvement of the Breed of Horses, which runs the racing season, shook hands with everybody—a big genial figure with a cigar and walking stick.

Chevy Chase Women Buy Club Outfit

Kitchen Cabinet, Dishes Selected at Display Rooms.

Mmes. Maguire, Linzel and Wilcox Among Those at Conference.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

The Chevy Chase Woman's Club may be taking its customary summer recess, but the building company, pledged to "erect and hold for the benefit of the club" its new clubhouse, has no vacation in sight.

Yesterday members of the company, Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, former president of the club, and Mrs. Frank P. Wilcox, vice president, met to consider estimates on furnishings and equipment. They assembled in one of the display rooms downtown at 10 o'clock to look at kitchen cabinets. After deciding on this they tackled the problem of dishes, tables and other equipment for serving 450 persons—the number the club will be able to accommodate for banquets and luncheons. The dishes will be white, with the four-letter monogram as a decorative design.

The morning devoted to conferences in display rooms was followed by luncheon at the Y. W. C. A. and a business meeting at the home of Mrs. Linzel, which lasted during the entire afternoon. Mrs. Joseph Travers Maguire, president of the cluo and also a member of the building company, was present, as were Mrs. Otis B. Johnson, who was elected assistant secretary; Mrs. Kenneth McRae, resident agent of the club; Mrs. Harrison Fitts, chairman of the house committee, who will handle rentals; Mrs. Frank M. Hoadley, a former president and immediate past president of the Maryland State Federation of Women's Clubs, and Mrs. Alexander McC. Ashley.

Three members who were out of the city were the only ones not present. They were Mrs. George A. Finch, secretary of the building company; Mrs. Frederick M. Kirby, treasurer, and Mrs. Orville S. Peters.

All decisions regarding the furnishing and equipment of the clubhouse are being made by the company as a whole. As the building progresses, more frequent meetings of the group are necessary than the members would be obliged to attend in the course of the busiest club season.

The auditorium, which will seat 700, will also be used for large banquets and luncheons by moving out some of the metal folding chairs to make place for long banquet tables. These will be stored under the large stage. This will be 20 by 44, the largest provided by any auditorium in Chevy Chase and is expected to be used by other groups which need such a hall.

Part of the interest, both among club members and outsiders, which has pushed the building forward and been apparent in co-operation from every side, is attributed to the fact that the new clubhouse will not only serve the club itself but will also fill a need for such a building in the community.

Through the ingenuity of E. Burton Corning, the architect, it has been made possible to add a wing on the level of the first floor for the kitchen, instead of having it in the basement as had been thought necessary in the beginning.

A plan has also been worked out for using a movable partition between the auditorium and the library on the first floor. Separate meetings can be held simultaneously in the two or they may be thrown together for large gatherings. The library is entered from the front on Connecticut avenue and has a large fireplace at either end. On the second floor is another room which may be used for meetings, and seats 100.

Mrs. Corning, wife of the architect, is an active member of the club and is serving on the House Committee. Both she and her husband are taking as much interest in the progress of the clubhouse as though it were their own home.

Women to See Alley Flowers

"Mary, Mary, quite contrary—"

The question, "How does your garden grow?" will be answered by pictures to be taken tomorrow by the alley window box committee of the Woman's Council of the Washington Federation of Churches.

In the spring, committee members from various denominations launched the plan of providing window boxes and plants for some of the Capital's alley dwellers and giving a prize later in the season to promote interest in tending the flowers. Wherever the project was undertaken a window box was given every family in the alley.

Tomorrow, if the weather is fair, colored motion pictures will be taken and the boxes inspected by the committee. Another tour may be made later in the summer, but has not been definitely set, and the judging of the boxes may rest with what they show tomorrow.

Mrs. Thomas W. Marshall is chairman of the alley window box project. Others in the party will include Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, president of the Woman's Council; Mrs. Thomas J. Howerton, chariman of the juvenile court department under which the work is carried on; Miss Etta Mai Russell, juvenile court worker, who will take the pictures and use them in her presentation of the work before women's organizations in the winter; Mrs. E. B. Bagley, Miss Helen Chamberlain, juvenile court chairmen for their denominations and the denominational representatives. These are Mrs. F. J. Hobbs, Disciples; Mrs. Bernice Johnson, Brethren; Mrs. C. H. Hall, Friends; Mrs. Dudley Carpenter, Episcopal; Mrs. S. T. Hughes, Baptist, and Mrs. F. W. Kilby, Congregational

The chairman in charge of each alley will also be present. Those visited will be Schotts Court, between First and Second and B and C northeast, Mrs. J. Berger, chairman; Delaware avenue and Independence avenue, Mrs. Charles Planick; Cookery court, Thirteen-and-a-half street, G and I southeast, Mrs. Johnson; Quander street and M place southeast, Mrs. J. S. Davis; Reeds court, L and M, Twenty-second and Twenty-third streets northwest, Mrs. H. B. Stabler; Cissel place, Mrs. Thomas J. Howerton; St. Dominicks court, Sixth and Seventh, E and F southwest, Mrs. J. H. Piercy.

People's Mandate Delegation Lauds Bolivia-Paraguay Pact

Representatives of the People's Mandate Committee yesterday called on Senor Pablo M. Insfran, Charge d' Affaires of Paraguay, at the Wardman Park Hotel, to extend congratulations on the signing of the treaty of peace by Bolivia and his government.

Miss Mabel Vernon, director of the Mandate Committee, presented the delegation, expressing appreciation of the peaceful settlement.

Dr. Esther J. Crooks, professor of Spanish at Goucher College, spoke in Spanish for "the thousands of women in the United States who rejoice over every occasion when a peaceful settlement is found for disputes. For this reason, we congratulate the Government of Paraguay on having been successful in joining with Bolivia in the use of arbitration in this conflict.

"We feel," she said, 'that this peaceful solution of a difficult situation sets a magnificent model for other countries and we trust that all governments will have the intelligence to follow the lead of Paraguay and Bolivia."

Mrs. Elizabeth Shirley Enochs characterized the event as of tremendous significance to all friends of world peace. "The American nations have demonstrated that peace machinery can be made to work," she said.

Mrs. Cecil Ira McReynolds, an active member of the Mandate Committee, declared it was "impossible to exaggerate the importance of the treaty."

In reply, Senor Insfran said much credit for the settlement is due to Gen. Estigarribia, Paraguayan Minister to the United States, who for three years led the armies of Paraguay in the Chaco war. When the Minister several weeks ago heard the peace conference was at a critical stage, he flew tot Buenos Aires, assumed leadership of the Paraguayan delegation and made it possible to continue negotiations.

The charge said he would forward the congratulations of the Mandate Committee at once to his government and the President of Paraguay.

When Miss Vernon asked if he would include with the congratulations the hope of the committee that Paraguay would ratify the Buenos Aires peace treaties before the Pan American Conference in Lima, Mr. Insfran sjated there was every prospect that this would be done.

The Minister from Bolivia will receive a similar delegation from the Mandate Committee this afternoon at 4 o'clock. Those in the party yesterday were Miss Vernon, Mrs. McReynolds, Miss Gertrude Crocker, treasurer, Peoples Mandate Committee; Mrs. Adele Ritzenberg Tracy, National Council of Jewish Juniors; Dr. Crooks, Miss Martha Souder, National Woman's Party; Mrs. Robert Boyer, Miss Margaret Lutz and Mrs. Enochs.

Bedtime Stories

How Crippy Was Found.

Mercy is a thing apart,
—Old Mother Nature.

Often we find mercy where we least expect to find it, and quite as often we find lack of mercy where we expect that of all places mercy will be found. A tender heart often is hidden by the roughest exterior, while all too frequently beauty and softness hide a heart of flint. Especially is this true in mankind where the furred and feathered folk and still lesser folk of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows are concerned. The evidence lies all along our highways that he who rides may see. Little people, who have been unable to get out of the way of cars, lie dead or crippled by the roadside, while all too often the killer speeds on without pause to see if anything can be done for the victim.

Happily there are some drivers in whose hearts mercy is always to be found. It was one of these whose truck struck but did not run over an animal that had attempted to cross the road not far from the home of Aunt Sally. It was night and his lights had picked up the animal just before it was hit, for it happened on a sharp curve. Instantly the driver applied his brakes. Jumping from the truck he ran back, and lying beside the road he found a Raccoon. It was not dead but badly hurt, and as he stooped to pick it up he saw that it had but three legs. The missing one evidently had been lost long before in a trap, for the fur had fully covered the end of the stump.

Gently he placed the sufferer on his coat beside him on the seat of his truck and headed straight for Wellset some 15 miles distant, where he knew there was a hospital for animals. There Crippy, for of course it was she, was tenderly cared for. She was badly hurt. She could not move her legs. Everything that could be done for her was done. She refused food, but drank water gratefully. The attendant suspected that she was someone's pet and advertised the fact that she was at the hospital. In another town a friend of Aunt Sally's, who had a picture of Crippy that had been taken in the woodhouse, suspected that the victim of the truck might be Crippy and at once visited the hospital, taking the photograph with her. There was no doubt in her mind or that of the attendant that the little sufferer was Crippy. It was then that Aunt Sally was telephoned to find out if Crippy was missing.

Her identity being thus established, the friend was most anxious to know what the chances were for Crippy to recover. The attendant shook his head sadly.

"I don't think she has a chance," said he. "She is paralyzed in her legs. You can see how stiff they are. She drinks water freely but she won't eat. She has eaten nothing since she arrived here. We cannot find that any bones are broken, but I suspect that her back is injured, poor thing. Of course if a wheel had passed over her she would have been crushed, I imagine that either she got almost across in front of the machine and was struck a glanging blow, or she started to turn back and the same thing happened. I had a feeling from the first that she is a pet."

"She is and she isn't," was the reply. "She isn't a pet in the sense that she was raised from a baby and kept in captivity. She was full grown and minus that leg when she first came to Aunt Sally's woodhouse, coming straight from the woods and going back to the woods. It has been so ever since. Never for one minute has she been denied her complete freedom. Why Aunt Sally doesn't even know where Crippy makes her home, where her babies are born. The latter have been brought to the woodhouse only after big enough to travel. Yes, Crippy is a pet, but not a captive, and never has been. She will let Aunt Sally stroke her and pat her and pick off the ticks that sometimes bother her. They are great friends and understand each other perfectly."

"Perhaps if Aunt Sally had her she might respond better," said the attendant.

So it was arranged that Crippy should be taken home.

College Unit Plans Busy D. C. Season

Miss Shelton Leads Mortar Board Alumnae Chapter.

Chapter Was Organized in Washington 3 Years Ago.

The Washington Alumnae Chapter of Mortar Board, honorary activities sorority for senior college women, is making plans for the coming season under the leadership of its new president, Miss Ruth Sheldon, home service director of the Washington Gas Co.

Miss Sheldon, who is immediate past president of the District of Columbia Home Economics Association, went directly from that office to the presidency of the Mortar Board Alumnae which has a local membership of about 80. Miss Sheldon is now a counselor of the Home Economics Association, is also a member of the executive board of the Zonta Club, a member of Omicron Nu, honarary home economics sorority; of the Home Economics Women in Business of which she is former chairman, and of the Nebraska Alumnae Association. She was elected a member of Mortar Board at the University of Nebraska in her senior year.

The Washington Alumnae chapter was organized in 1935 with Mrs. Raleigh Gilchrist as its first president. She was followed by Miss Nancy Finch, of the Public Health Service. The alumnae were responsible for instituting the chapter at the University of Maryland in 1936 and that at George Washington University last winter. The G. W. chapter was organized from the membership of Hour Glass, which qualified as the local honorary society for senior women.

The alumnae at present includes more members from chapters in distant places than from those at either George Washington or Maryland universities. This will not long be the case as graduates from those two are added to it, bringing more local girls into its ranks.

Active Chapter Delegates Return

Miss Mary Jo Mitchell, of Hyattsville, returned only a few days ago from Colorado, where she attended the national convention of the organization at Troutdale-in-the-Pines as delegate from the George Washington Chapter, of which she is president for the coming year. Miss Jane Kephart, of Takoma Park, who went as the delegate from Maryland University Chapter, which she heads, returned immediately after the convention closed. Miss Mitchell, as representative of the newest of the chapters in the country, gave a toast to the alumnae at the closing banquet and she also was selected to lead the round table on mortar board problems for the group comprising the urban chapters.

The convention celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the society. Mrs. Fred D. Coleman, of Lincoln, Nebr., was re-elected as national president.

New Alumnae Officers Announced

Officers of the Washington Alumnae Chapter, in addition to Miss Sheldon, are: Miss Katherine Chiswell, who is a graduate of William and Mary, vice president; Miss Myra Hall, who is a native of South Dakota and a graduate of the University of Colorado, recording secretary; Mrs. Margaret Boaz, a graduate of George Washington, corresponding secretary, and Miss Edith Brechbill, University of Maryland alumna and now a teacher in the high school at Hyattsville, treasurer. Miss Brechbill was the Maryland Chapter delegate to the national convention at Lake Lure, N. C., two years ago.

Traditional services at George Washington University which are maintained by the new chapter there include holding freshman assemblies at the beginning of each semester, when members explain school activities and customs; conducting an information booth during registration; having members available to receive and assist at university functions; giving a tea during the homecoming for professors emeritus; presenting a cup at class-night services to the outstanding sophomore woman and ushering at the Cue and Curtain performances. The Maryland chapter likewise co-operates with the dean of women during orientation week, and assists in university activities just as does the chapter at George Washington.

Inquiries Sped In Two States As Voting Nears

By the Associated Press.

The Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee speeded up its investigative machinery yesterday in an effort to obtain reports on inquiries in Kentucky and Tennessee before primary elections in those States next week.

At the same time, it received a request from A. H. Greening, Springfield, Ill., otherwise unidentified to the committee, that it look into charges that Federal aid road funds had been misused in the Illinois senatorial primary campaign in April.

Session Tomorrow.

Chairman Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas, said Greening's telegram would be laid before the committee tomorrow at a meeting called to hear reports from Pennsylvania, Tennessee and Kentucky.

He said the committee would try to obtain a conclusive report on the Kentucky and Tennessee investigations. Tennessee citizens will vote August 3 and those of Kentucky August 6.

Sheppard disclosed committee members also would study an analysis of newspaper reports of charges that public money had been used for political purposes in Missouri, where Senator Clark (Democrat), is running for renomination.

Pepper Hits Vandenberg.

A complaint from Senator George (Democrat), Georgia, that a Federal official had been discharged in that State because he was going to vote for the Senator, also will be laid before the committee, Sheppard said.

The group will consider, too, the recent remark of Harry L. Hopkins, WPA administrator, that 90 per cent of 3,000,000 persons on relief favored the Roosevelt Administration.

Meanwhile Senator Pepper (Democrat), Florida, renominated New Dealer, accused Senator Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, of trying to avoid the "real issue" of liberalism vs. conservatism in 1940 by raising the question whether President Roosevelt would seek a third term.

Charges Diversion.

Vandenberg, the Florida Senator said, was attempting to divert attention from the President's efforts to liberalize the Democratic Party and to make liberalism the chief issue of the campaign.

Vandenberg, in a letter to a Michigan constituent, had predicted Mr. Roosevelt would try to stay in the White House.

"I expect him to try, but I do not expect him to succeed," the Michigan Senator declared. "Mr. Roosevent may be stopped in his own Democratic convention, where the more liberal Jeffersonians will cling to their party founder's horror of any such imperial tenure."

Stresses Liberalism.

Pepper, renominated last spring with the public aid of James Roosevelt, said he did not think President Roosevelt desired a third term.

"The President is more interested in preserving liberal Democracy in the Democratic Party," he said.

"There is no question in my mind but that the people are with the President, believe in him and will support the policies and the man whom he supports."

Charles Arnold's Death 2d in House Within Five Days

Death has struck twice in five days in the two-family dwelling at 4602 Forty-third street northwest.

Yesterday, Charles M. Arnold, 23, who lived at the same house with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Knox Arnold, died suddenly at Georgetown Hospital.

Mr. Arnold was an employe of the District Unemployment Compensation Board. His father, now on a trip to California, is a retired economist of the Federal Trade Commission.

Born in Hawkinsville, Ga., Mr. Arnold was graduated from Central High School in 1932. He belonged to Sigma Delta fraternity.

He went to Devitt School for a year, and then attended George Washington University.

Mr. Arnold is survived by his parents and three brothers, Lieut. John K. Arnold, jr., of the Army Air Corps, stationed at Brooks Field, Texas, and Robert and Scott Arnold, of Washington.

Police Find Loot In D.C. Robberies Worth Thousands

The police pick-up squad, headed by Lieut. Joseph Shimon, yesterday found several thousand dollars worth of loot stolen in burglaries throughout Washington in a room in the 1300 block of Massachusetts avenue northwest. The room was once rented by Harry C. O'Dell, 40, whose landlady held his effects when he didn't pay his bill. She didn't rent the room after he left last December.

There was reason for her not renting the room again. O'Dell had almost filled it with an accumulation of articles that included a District water meter, television equipment, radios, several cameras and a large quantity of jewelry.

'House That Jack Built' Opens

House Jack ($1,500) Built Open to Public

Century-Old Shack, Now Renovated, Has Beautiful Hostess.

It was only a tumbledown shack when the Junior Board of Commerce put it in the park at Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest three months ago.

But now that century-old frame house could be a love nest for any young couple—if they didn't mind the traffic noises at the corner.

The whole thing was part of the clean-up campaign conducted by the board.

There were reversals, of course. First thing that the Junior Board of Commerce knew, people were moving a full-fledged airplane into their lot. As a result, the board had to move the house to the other corner of the park, near Fifteenth street.

But yesterday the project came to fruition. The house was officially opened at noon and the keys turned over to Mrs. Helen Greene Peters, 1937 Miss Washington. She will act as hostess there for the next two weeks.

Already 100,000 persons have visited the house and it is believed that many more will drop in during the next two weeks to see what Jack ($1,500) can do.

At one period while the house was was being renovated, the Junior Board of Comerce was hampered by labor trouble and members were forced to help finish the job with paint and bruish.

Franco Warns French Against Sheltering Ship

Asserts Right to Bomb Loyalist Destroyer in Foreign Port.

Burgos, Spain, July 25 (U.P.).—The Spanish insurgents warned tonight that they claim a "legitimate right" to bomb the loyalist destroyer Jose Luis Diaz in a French port if it takes refuge there after shelling a non-military Spanish port. The nationalists said the destroyer planned such a bombardment after a year in drydock at Le Havre, France, undergoing repairs.

The note mentioned Casablanca, French Morocco, as a possible refuge for the loyalist destroyer and concluded:

"We want and trust that the French authorities will avoid what, if carried out, would represent new proof of complicity with flagrant red attacks, against all kinds and forms of international pacts, wiping out the current rapprochement with a neighbor nation."

British Ship Bombed.

The British steamer Belwynn, 1,687 tons, out of Newcastle, was bombed, machine-gunned and set afire by an insurgent seaplane at Port Gandia this morning. The plane returned and bombed and machine-gunned the harbor and the city. The Bellwyn was set afire by an incendiary bomb dropped when the plane was so low it almost scraped the ship's bow, her officer said.

Insurgent troops drove through crumbling loyalist lines on a 100-mile front in southwestern Spain today, closing in on the rich mercury mines of Ciudad Real Province and threatening to push on and encircle Madrid.

The two-day advance of Generalissimo Franco's troops in the west widened the north-south corridor along the Portugal border to 80 miles and came while loyalist lines were depleted by transfer of 60,000 men to the eastern front where a deadlock has occurred in the fierce battle of Valencia.

Lt. Col. Giffin Often Drunk, Woman Tells Court-Martial

Witness Admits She Had 'Animosity' Toward Accused Officer.

New York, July 25 (A.P.).—Mrs. James Smith, jr., wife of an Army Reserve officer, today testified at the court-martial of Lieut. Col. Stewart F. Giffin, that he had been intoxicated on several occasions in company with the Smiths.

Mrs. Smith appeared as complaining witness after the court had temporarily recessed at Governors Island when defense counsel, Col. Robert Starr Allyn, challenged three affidavits he said had been admitted despite repudiation by witnesses on the stand.

Col. Giffin is charged with conduct unbecoming an officer and gentleman.

Mrs. Smith testified she had "animosity" toward Giffin.

"Through Col. Giffin's false promises," she said, "we lost our home, our furniture and our car."

She said Col. Giffin told her he was about to retire or resign—she didn't remember which—and wanted to go in business, which he asked Lieut. Smith to operate.

"After my husband had spent all his money, Col. Giffin said he had changed his mind," she testified.

First witnesses for the defense were among those present at a dance at Willkill, March 17, when it was alleged Giffin was drunk and fell on the floor while dancing. They declared he was sober and his behavior was decorous.

MRS. JAMES SMITH, Jr.

Mrs. R. B. Baker, wife of a reserve officer, said the fall occurred while she and Giffin were engaged in a friendly scuffle.

The court overruled a motion by Col. Allyn for dismissal of the charges. He said that no official acts were involved, that no act while on duty was conceived and that only one incident in the complaint allegedly occurred while Giffin was in uniform.

Mrs. John L. Lewis. . . . nurses agog?

In pursuit of wisdom I phoned an important New Deal official the other evening. His young son answered the phone, a lad of high-school age. When I asked him to call his father, fancy my astonishment as I heard him yell out:

The boy probably reveres Roosevelt as the Pater of his country.

• • • •

One of the more fantastic tales I heard in Hollywood was about the movie producer visiting New York, who, invited to a formal party, didn't know how to wear his bow tie.

• • • •

In despair he phoned his wife in Hollywood; she tried to tell him how over the phone, then gave up and suggested that their friend, Imogene, was in New York and might tie it for him.

"But where is she staying?" he demanded.

"I don't know," said the wife, "but her husband is at Palm Springs."

So the movie mastermind phoned Palm Springs, got the name of Imogene's hotel, rode over there in a taxi and got his necktie tied.

He probably specializes in movies of high society. But come the revolution he'll wear ready-tied ties.

"Jim called it millions."

One Congressman's vacation has been interrupted by a complaint by a constituent who is a WPA worker. This constituent, hearing about the new civil service act, protested that the act might put him under the civil service, thus giving him a steady job.

"And I don't want a steady job," protested the WPA patriot. (I must see if I can trace this tale back to G. O. P.'s John Hamilton.

Washington nurses have been mildly agog because Mrs. John L. Lewis, wife of the union leader, while at Emergency Hospital was attended by two nurses, each working 12 hours a day. Nurses in Washington are not unionized, but their association is endeavoring to obtain the eight-hour day which has been conceded by many patients. I'm sure Mr. Lewis would do the right thing if informed about this, which he hereby is.

GILT OFF THE DOME: Marvin McIntyre gave Al Jolson a bridge lesson aboard the Santa Fe super Chief on his way back to Washington . . . Tommy Corcoran's younger brother has some ideas for the improvement of our Foreign Service . . . In betting $1,000 on Senator Elmer Thomas' renomination in Oklahoma, young Elliott Roosevelt relied heavily on advance information from a Government survey, which said the silvery Roosevelt Senator had it in the bag.

"But Adolf's police are too clever."

Usually a shark on figures, Jim Farley got tripped up by the colossal amounts so commonplace in Washington and said in dedicating a postoffice: "This building cost $200,000,000."

• • • •

As the third-term talk begins to grow shriller toward a crescendo two years away, one hears opponents of a third term clear across the country using one argument: A third term would violate so grievously a great American tradition that it might stir up violence and might even jeopardize the safety of the President. Or, more bluntly, as they put it, "Someone might take a shot at him." Could it be wishful thinking?

• • • •

On the other hand, there's the possibility that Mr. Roosevelt's opponents wouldn't feel much worse about his third term than they did about his second term.

Incidentally, globe-trotters return from Europe with persistent tales that attempts have been made the past year to assassinate Stalin, Hitler and Mussolini, and that the attempts have been hushed up. One traveler says it is common gossip in the bars of Paris that Hitler's cleyer secret police have foiled three or four plots against his life this year. But such trivialities (if true) must be hard to get past the censors.

The pyramiding of health and happiness—not wealth—for growing children, is the aim of typical summer camps to which The Post Camp Fund is sending underprivileged children.

$14 Will Provide 2 Weeks of Happy Times for One Boy or Girl.

This is the seventh of a series of articles outlining the needs of 100 underprivileged children whom local agencies have recommended for two weeks at camp and for whom The Post is raising a $1,400 camp fund. The eighth will appear tomorrow.

A hit-run driver injured 13-year-old Louise five years ago. The damage he did has been repaired somewhat by time, but progress is slow. Unless the girl is given better treatment than her widowed mother can afford or cares to provide, she may never become a normal woman.

The accident caused a brain concussion, which in turn necessitated an operation. Constant ill health has prevented the girl from returning to school. She has not yet learned to read or write.

At a nearby settlement house, Louise has learned to work and play. Social workers believe she could go to school in the fall if she had a chance to live for a short while with others of her age and become adjusted to the normal life she may some day lead.

Better Than Medicine.

She and her mother are being supported by an aunt who cannot send Louise to camp. With the help of its readers, The Post will step in and give Louise the inexpensive treatment which will do more for her than medicine.

It will cost $14 to send her to camp for two weeks, $7 for one week. Contributions to the camp fund may be mailed to The Post camp fund editor or deposited in the fund box on the first floor of The Post Building.

Contributions to the fund so far assure vacations for 39 children who, like Louise, will benefit from the experience more than the luckier boys and girls whose parents can afford to send them to camp.

Twelve-year-old Peggy suffers from a physical handicap. Blind from birth, she, too, needs more sympathetic guidance than she can get in her crowded five-room home, where she lives with her father, two brothers, grandmother and seven cousins.

Boy Supports Family.

Jessie, 12, is supported by an older brother, who makes $16 a week as a truck driver's helper. His wages must also support his mother, three other boys and another sister. So Jessie, who is pale, nervous and undernourished, will not get the vacation he looked forward to all winter.

Fourteen-year-old Ted is the innocent victim of martial troubles. His father disappeared soon after his birth, leaving his mother to care for him. Then five years ago his mother died. Since then he has lived with a sister who recently was deserted by her husband. She has a son of her own to support, and somewhat resents Ted's presence.

Marjorie, 13, is one of those children who, in a social worker's words, look as though they were about to "fall to pieces." An attack of double mastoid brought her near death last winter, and she hasn't gained an ounce of weight since. She urgently needs the balanced diet and regular life camp offers. But supporting her and her four older brothers and sisters takes all her father's $16 weekly salary.

Sisters Need Help.

Two sisters, 13 and 12, will benefit from two weeks in the open. Their father deserted their mother just before the birth of a baby brother last year. Even when he was around, constant bickering between the parents robbed the family of its stability. Beth and Olive spend their spare time playing in the streets with companions of their own choosing. They are now at an age when discipline is essential. Their mother has neither time nor inclination to furnish it. Neither has she money to send them to camp.

A similar situation confronts the three girls in another family. Their parents are separated. With their mother and six brothers and sisters, they must move frequently because of nonpayment of rent, but wherever they move their home is dirty and carelessly managed. Their mother and two older sisters have acquired a doubtful reputation in the neighborhood where they now live. Delinquency lies ahead, their case worker feels, unless they can be taken for a time from their unwholesome environment.

Fireworks Mark Georgia Avenue 40 and 8 Parade

Flares and firecrackers marked a parade held last night on Georgia avenue by Grand Voiture No. 174 of the Forty and Eight, American Legion honor and fun society prior to installation of 19 members.

More than 200 persons were in the procession, led by National Chef de Chemin de Fer Fred G. Fraser, of Washington; Grand Chef de Gare John E. McCabe and Sous-Chef de Chemin de Fer William Dowd.

The parade included representatives of the Forty and Eight from Alexandria, Frederick, Baltimore, Hagerstown and Wilmington, and the drum corps of Fort Stevens Post, No. 32.

The initiation ceremonies were held in Stansbury Lodge Hall, 5832 Georgia avenue northwest, in charge of William H. Hargrave. Past Grand Chef de Gare Francis F. Miller arranged the entertainment.

100 Citizens Oppose GHA Hospital Plan

Montgomery Commissioners Urged to Deny Permit to Group.

15 Speakers Depict Fears of Noise and Contagious Disease.

Approximately 100 citizens last night attended a public hearing called by the Montgomery County Commissioners to consider the Group Health Association's proposal that it operate a hospital on Davidson drive, in Bethesda.

Most of the citizens appeared opposed to the commissioners' granting a permit to the G. H. A., the organization that has been bitterly opposed by the District Medical Society.

Some 15 of those present spoke against the measure, arguing that neighborhood residents would be annoyed by ambulances and imperiled by contagious diseases and that the establishment of such a hospital would commercialize a residential zone.

Commissioners at the hearing were Robert D. Hagner, of Bethesda, and Clay Plummer, of Gaithersburg. They will consider the evidence presented and, with the other three commissioners, will decide next Monday on whether to grant the permit.

Ormond Lewis, a member of the G. H. A. board of trustees, asked that the permit be granted but pointed out that if the residents in the vicinity were not in favor of the hospital that "we won't press the matter."

The site which the G. H. A. has chosen for its hospital is a block west of Wisconsin avenue and opposite the Chevy Chase Country Club golf course. At present the land, a house and two outbuildings are owned by John F. Grosby.

Vacation on Boss' Money Ends in Court for Youth

A pleasure trip trough New York, Philadelphia and Richmond allegedly financed by $115 of his employer's money resulted in the appearance in Police Court yesterday of Walter J. Brady, 21.

Judge Edward M. Curran held him for the grand jury under $1,000 bond on a charge of larceny after trust. It was testified that Brady, employed by the Zoltrow Fish Market, was given the money to take to a bank on June 29. He was not see nagain until the time of his arrest.

The youth, according to police, signed a statement that he used the money "to travel, eat and buy a new suit."

Man in Hospital, Head Injured by Blank Cartridge

Injuries received from a blank cartridge he fired against his right temple sent George A. O'Donnell, 76, to Casualty Hospital yesterday. His condition was said not to be serious.

Mrs. Marie Concanone, O'Donnell's housekeeper, stated that she was in the kitchen of his house at 1222 Randolph street northeast, when she heard a shot on the second floor. She rushed upstairs and found O'Donnell on a couch, with blood streaming from his head. The wound was caused by concussion.

Mrs. Concanone said that O'Donnell, a retired employe of the Government Printing Office, had been in bad health. His wife died 15 years ago.

Mrs. Pleadwell's $596,000 Estate Is Left to Daughter

Leaving personal property valued at $596,000, Mrs. Theodosia W. Pleadwell, formerly of Washington but more recently of New York, directed in her will that her daughter, Theodosia H. Pleadwell, was to receive the entire net income from the estate for life. The payments are to be made in quarterly installments.

A brother, Col. R. R. Wallace, U. S. M. C., was not provided for in the will because, it was stated, he had been amply provided for under his mother's will. The American Security & Trust Co. and Alfred C. Fletcher are named executors.

Hazen Strikes a Blow to Save Right to Sleep Late in A. M.

Commissioner Hazen's agents yesterday were put on the trail of an undetermined number of barking dogs, crowing roosters, and cackling pigeons.

Because Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, admitted that his department was stumped, the commissioner named a special committee to conduct an official inquiry with the aim of drafting new police regulations which will protect late sleepers.

The committee comprises E. W. Thomas, assistant corporation counsel; J. Frank Butts, director of sanitary inspection, health department, and Assistant Police Superintendent Lewis I. H. Edwards.

"I get lots of complaints which I turn over to the police," Hazen said, "but the police tell me that they can't do anything unless someone swears to a warrant or unless they keep a constant watch on a dog or chickens."

The commissioner took the matter up with Health Officer George C. Ruhland, who said his department is likewise powerless so long as the owners have permits.

"It seems to me that we should have some sort of regulation which would control these nuisances without so much red tape," Hazen said. "I believe that Washingtonians are entitled to as much sleep as they can get in the morning especially after one of these hot nights."

The committee is authorized to make a study of the police regulations and to recommend any additions or amendments which they believe will remedy the situation.

Cowboy Fireman Brings Bit of West to Bald Eagle Hill

Billy Gee, the "cowboy fireman" who now is with No. 10 Engine Company after 14 years with Ringling Brothers, entertained yesterday at Bald Eagle Hill Camp with Wild West stunts. Upper picture shows him cracking the Australian whip around the neck of his pretty assistant, Mary Johnston. Miss Johnston, dressed as an Indian, "bit the dust" when she was wounded slightly by a .22-caliber bullet that ricocheted in the trick shooting act. Lower picture shows a nurse dressing the wound.

6 Child Deaths Spur Police; 2 Drivers Freed

Traffic

record of children's deaths in the last eight weeks has been the worst the District ever has experienced. He pleaded with traffic patrolmen to "stop this killing of children."

To Stop Street Play.

Maj. Brown's order said:

"Since June 1, 1938, six children have been killed in motor vehicle accidents here. Of these six, one was 2, two were 3, two were 9 and one was 12 years old. These six deaths indicate lack of proper supervision of children while on public space. You will instruct the members of your command wherever children of tender years are found at play in the public streets, to endeavor to ascertain the name and address of their parents and advise them of the danger involved where children are permitted in the streets without adult supervision.

"Members of the department should discourage as far as possible the playing in streets and encourage the use of playgrounds.

"While the motorist has an important responsibility in aviding accidents, an important responsibility rests not only with the parents but also with the police in seeing that children are properly supervised and not permitted to engage in play at locations where they may be seriously injured or killed."

Offenses Are Listed.

Van Duzer requested a tightening of enforcement of both major and minor traffic laws. He named in particular the offenses of cutting corners, failure to stop at signs, failure to give hand signals, driving while drunk and reckless driving.

"We can't stop children from running into the streets," Holmes declared, "but we can try. If we carry out Maj. Brown's order, I have no doubt that the number of deaths will decrease."

Holmes said he has planned a tour of downtown police precincts with Van Duzer. He intends to recommend to policemen the necessity of traffic law enforcement and particularly education of civilians, particularly education of civilians," he said.

Woman Driver Cleared.

A coroner's jury held that the death Thursday of Robert Williams, 9, of 4602 Forty-third street northwest, was accidental. Witnesses said the child coasted at full speed on a "wheel sled" from an alley directly into the path of a car driven by Mrs. Marie Hall Eisinger, 40, of 4300 Brandywine street northwest.

Mrs. Eisinger told police her view of the alley was obstructed by a parked automobile and a hedge.

Two of the boy's playmates, Frederick Causey, 9, of 4222 River road, and Philip Irwin, 8, 4119 Brandywine street northwest, testified.

Donald A. Swope, 25, of 916 Tenth street northeast, was cleared of blame in the death of Joseph Franklin Lee, colored, 55, of 666 Callan street northeast, who was struck and fatally injured by Swope's car Wednesday night as he crossed K street near Seventh street northeast.

Child, Man of 58 Hurt.

Meanwhile, 8-year-old Kinchen Fennell, jr., colored, of 916 N street northwest, sustained a possible fracture of the skull and internal injuries yesterday when he was struck near his home by a car operated by John C. Palmer, jr., University Park, Md.

Police said the child ran across the street from between two parked cars. He was taken to Children's Hospital. Palmer was arrested and held for reckless driving at No. 13 Precinct.

Bernard Brown, 58, of Cherrydale, Va., was struck by a car at Seventh street and Constitution avenue when, police said, he attempted to cross the street against a red light. He was taken to Emergency Hospital, suffering a possible skull fracture. The car was driven by William E. Abernethy, jr., of 1610 Sixteenth street northwest.

D.C. Heads Pick Assessment Appeal Board

Officials Will Hear Protests on Paving and Other Special Levies.

A three-man committee to pass on appeals from any special District assessments under the uniform assessment law approved last month was named by the District Commissioners yesterday.

Walter L. Fowler, assistant corporation counsel, was named chairman. The other members are Edward A. Dent, District surveyor, and Tax Assessor Fred D. Allen.

Under the assessment act just enacted all special assessments levied by the District, whether they have to do with paving, sewers or water mains may be adjusted or repealed, if in the judgment of the Commissioners, they are inequitable.

The act also makes uniform the notices used by the District in making special assessments and the interest rates charged.

Any property owner aggrieved by a special assessment levied for any public improvement, other than one imposed by a jury in a condemnation case, may file a protest with the Commissioners within 60 days after receiving a notice, the law states.

After a hearing and a report by the three-man committee, the Commissioners may rule.

Medical Society To Survey City Health Needs

Moves to Meet Challenge Care Is Unavailable to Capital's Poor.

The District Medical Society yesterday took steps to meet the challenge that organized medicine is not insuring an equitable distribution of its benefits by launching a comprehensive survey of the city's medical needs.

Closely following charges made at the National Health Conference here that medical care frequently is not available to those of limited means, the society, it was revealed yesterday, has decided to take a poll of opinion of Washington physicians as well as conduct a fact-finding survey.

Hospitals, welfare and Governmental agencies, school, colleges and universities, industrial and other groups are to be included in the survey.

A good start on the study already has been made through the use of questionaires. Many answers have been received containing data and opinion in detail.

Results of the survey, first of such a comprehensive nature ever undertaken by the organized profession here, will be compiled through the summer and reported to the society at its fall meeting.

Regulations to Cover Insurance Laws Will Be Issued.

The Public Utilities Commission yesterday denied a plea of the Independent Taxi Owners Association to amend its order limiting the number of cabs in an association to 1,000 as it prepared to issue regulations governing the compulsory taxicab insurance law which becomes effective August 29.

With the aid of Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, a member of the House District Committee, the Independent Taxi Owners Association, which operates the Diamond cabs, sought to persuade the commission to increase the maximum to 1,500.

The Diamond Association had 1,195 cabs, as of yesterday. Under the commission's order it will not be permitted to add any cabs until the number falls, through natural causes, below 1,000.

A membership of 1,500 would have given the Diamond Co. a distinct advantage under the taxi insurance act, which establishes a maximum blanket policy or bond or sinking fund of $75,000 for an association.

There are now about a score of associations of taxicab owners in Washington, and new ones may be formed with a minimum of 100 cabs.

The commission is empowered to adjust the size of the insurance policy, bond or sinking fund for associations with membership well under 1,000.

Two sets of regulations, one from the commission and one from the superintendent of insurance, will be issued following a conference today.

For the third time in three days, blonde, blue-eyed Helen disappeared yesterday from her home at 324 Farragut street northwest. She had not been heard from at a late hour last night.

On Saturday, Helen spent seven hours in a neighborhood theater, watching four shows in succession while her parents and police frantically looked for her. She turned up at 11:30 p. m.

Sunday she was missing five hours before she was found asleep in an areaway behind a neighbor's house.

Mrs. Ernest King, the child's mother, said last night Helen was the only one of the three girls and six boys in the family who ever disappeared from home. "If any more would go off like this, I guess I'd go crazy," she observed.

Helen Hayes Is Voted Winner Of "Ten Greatest" Symposium

Washington Star Acclaimed Foremost by 150 Distinguished Theatergoers in Morehouse Poll; Booking Changes; Warner's New Pictures; Auditions; Notes.

HELEN HAYES, Washington's contribution to the American theater's list of most distinguished stars, was voted the winner of the New York Sun's symposium of "Ten Great Performances," conducted by Ward Morehouse in his "Broadway After Dark" column, to which reference frequently has been made in this space.

BELL.

The final results of Mr. Morehouse's tabulations of the 150 lists, submitted by three groups of theatergoing notables of 50 voters each, was published in last Saturday's issue of the Sun and showed Miss Hayes the undisputed winner, with 81 votes. Katharine Cornell was second, with 58 votes, and Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne, as an acting partnership, third, with 52. The remaining seven of the first ten stars were Jeanne Eagles, with 43 votes; John Barrymore, 43; Maude Adams, 40; Mrs. Fiske, 29; John Gielgud, 26; David Warfield, 24, and Richard Mansfield, 22.

The three voting groups were comprised of many of the foremost figures in the American theater, literature, statesmanship, music, art, commerce and the newspaper field. Each person balloting was requested to submit a list of the ten most memorable performances he ever had witnessed in the theater. This "little game of recollection and tribute" was inaugurated last January 22 and was only completed last week.

While Mr. Morehouse discovered that a majority of Miss Hayes' supporters listed her current vehicle, "Victoria Regina," as deserving of all-time honors, others recalled her playing in "Dear Brutus," Coquette," "What Every Woman Knows" and "Clarence."

Miss Cornell's admirers cited "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," "Candida," "A Bill of Divorcement" and "Romeo and Juliet." Lunt and Fontanne won their following by their performances in "Reunion in Vienna," Jeanne Eagels by her unforgettable portrayal of Sadie Thompson in "Rain" and John Barrymore and John Gielgud by their assumption of the role of Hamlet.

There were several prominent players who crowded close upon the heels of those comprising the "first ten" group. They were Mme. Alla Nazimova, Ethel Barrymore, Ruth Gordon, Maurice Evans and Pauline Lord. The balloting also revealed strong support for William Gillette, Otis Skinner, George M. Cohan, Gertrude Lawrence, Emily Stevens, Ina Claire—another Washingtonian—and Laurette Taylor.

One of the conspicuous characteristics of Mr. Morehouse's interesting canvass of the top layer of the theatergoing public was the preponderance of the vote cast in favor of stars and plays that fall within the easy memory of the present generation of playgoers. There seems to be not too many left who recall the Bernhardts, the Joseph Jeffersons, the Irvings and Terrys, the Nat Goodwins, the elder Sothern, the Julia Marlowes and the countless others who flourished in an earlier era in the theater, but one which, nevertheless, should fall within the vivid recollection of those still living.

Hold everything!

By one of those eleventh-hour switches in bookings that occur periodically in "show business," the celluloid scene on F street next week will not be quite as originally planned. "Love Finds Andy Hardy," featuring Lewis S. Stone, Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland and Ann Rutherford, instead of opening Friday on the screen at Loew's Capitol Theater, will be seen at the Palace, thus cutting short the run of Shirley Temple in "Little Miss Broadway." Supplanting "Love Finds Andy Hardy," at the Capitol on Friday, will be "I'll Give a Million," with Warner Baxter, Peter Loore, Marjorie Weaver, Jean Hersholt, John Carradin, J. Edward Bromberg and Lynn Bari.

At the moment, that is all the corrections there are to be pasted in your hat, although there is a possibility that word may come along any time now that "Mother Carey's Chickens" will beat the gun, in a manner of speaking, and open tomorrow or next day at RKO-Keith's.

What are heralded as outstanding motion picture productions from the studios of Warner Brothers-First National, Paramount and Columbia will present famous stars in screen versions of Broadway stage hits, best-selling novels and original film stories at the Earle and Metropolitan theaters during the 1938-39 season, according to detailed announcement made yesterday by Zone Manager John J. Payette, of the Warner interests in Washington.

Among the productions from Warner Brothers will be two starring vehicles for Bette Davis, including "The Sisters," from the Myron Brinig novel, and costarring Errol Flynn; "Memphis Belle," by Mark Hellinger; "The Lady With Red Hair," and "Dark Victory;" James Cagney and Pat O'Brien in "Boy Meets Girl," from the Spewacks' stage play; "Angels With Dirty Faces," with the "Dead End"-"Crime School" kids and Cagney and O'Brien, and "The Oklahoma Kid," a story of the Western frontier. Errol Flynn and Giner Rogers will costar in "You Can't Escape Forever," and a new version of "The Desert Song" will be executed entirely in Technicolor.

Additional releases from Burbank continue with Edward G. Robinson in "The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse," "The Thousand Dollar Window," "The Orchid Kid," with Wayne Morris; "Wings of the Navy," "Daughters Courageous," "Valley of the Giants," "Sally," "Baby Doctor," "Dodge City," "Brother Rat," "Yes My Darling Daughter," "The Sea Wolf" and a considerable number of others.

First among the Columbia productions will be "You Can't Take It With You," a picturization of the Pulitzer Prize play, under the direction of Frank Capra, with Jean Arthur, James Stewart, Lionel Barrymore, Edward Arnold and Mischa Auer in the cast. "Golden Boy," the Clifford Odets' Play, is another that will be filmed by this company. There will be still others from this source, starring such favorites as Irene Dunne, Cary Grant, Melvyn Douglas and many more. Among the important titles are "The Women," by Clare Booth; A. J. Cronin's "The Citadel" and "This Thing Called Love," a comedy by Edwin Burke.

In immediate prospect are "Professor, Beware," Harold Lloyd's first feature-comedy in several seasons, and "Give Me a Sailor," with Martha Raye, Bob Hope and Betty Grable.

Yes, these are tough days in the cinema!

Last night's special bus to the Roadside Theater was the only one that will make the trip during the fortnight's engagement of "The Miner's Daughter." On next Monday night, August 1, the entire house has been bought out by the Young Republicans Club of Montgomery County and no tickets will be sold to the public either at the theater or its downtown office in Mrs. Dorsey's Concert Bureau.

First auditions for the sixth annual "Going Native Revue," to be staged at Loew's Capitol Theater next month, will be held next Monday night, August 1, in the Willard Room of the Willard Hotel. This parade of aspirants for parts in this year's production will begin promptly at 8 o'clock and, on the basis of past years' experience, will continue into the wee small hours of the morning.

Also predicated on earlier records, it probably will be impossible to hear all of the applicants in a single evening. With this in mind, arrangements have been made by Divisional Manager Carter Barron, of Loew's, Inc., and Howard Burkhardt, manager of the Capitol, to hold a second evening of auditions in the Willard's Bamboo Room on Tuesday night, also beginning at 8 o'clock. Announcement of a third session, if one proves necessary, will be made later.

Applications for participation in this year's "Going Native" must be filed with the Capitol management not later than next Monday afternoon. They may be obtained at any Loew theater or from the drama desks of the local press.

When moonlight passengers aboard the S. S. Potomac this Saturday night ask for "Music, maestro, please," the maestro will be George Hall, who is bringing his famous dance band down from New York for a week-end on the river. There will be two cruises Saturday night, one leaving the Seventh street wharf at 8:45 p. m., the second at 12:30 a. m. Among the other "name" bands furnishing musical diversion on later Saturday cruises will be Sammy Kaye and his orchestra, August 6, and Paul Whiteman, August 20.

The Post's New Yorker

DEAR BOSS:
When I waved good-by to you last Wednesday and watched the Normandie sail majestically down the bay I felt that I could lift my head high with the pride of emancipation—even though the emancipation would be only for the duration of your vacation. My best clothes were laid aside ready for packing and my room reserved at one of the finest—on the Borscht circuit—for Friday night. My plans were made.

* * * *

BUT WHO am I to kick if my plans did not pan out according to schedule? If a columnist never can be sure of what the next day or next hour will bring—how can a columnist's humble secretary complain, when she reaps a little uncertainty—which goes with her job—as well as a little reflected glory and a few Annie Oakleys?

* * * *

YOU KNOW, dear boss, that I need that vacation almost as much as you do and that I would gladly follow instructions to get out of the city immediately and stay out until your return. But what am I to do if your friends are so slow in coming through for you as they promised?

* * * *

THAT EMINENT writer! A sweetheart of a friend, if ever there was one! Why, oh why, did she have to wait until you had sailed to wire you at the office that after writing all that slush for the movies she couldn't think of anything good enough to fill the Lyons Den while the Lyons was prowling in foreign veldts. She says she is so-o-o sorry. Well, what can you do with a friend like that, who goes complimentary on you in order to make backing out of her promise look graceful?

* * * *

AND THAT famous playwright, I always thought his friendship for you was so deep and could stand any test—like yours for him. Why did he call your slavey late the afternoon of your sailing to say that he just can't make it? No, he hadn't promised. But I thought that friendship such as his would strain convenience to go to bat for an absent friend, as long, as he didn't say "no" to you personally.

* * * *

SOME OF YOUR friends did come through for you in record time, though. Publisher Max Schuster is one of the swellest. He certainly will have added a long flowing feather to his chapeau by the grand column your readers, his for a day—even though it was a good plug for Simon & Schuster—read in your space, under his name.

* * * *

SIDNEY KINGSLEY is a sweetheart. He not only wrote a very interesting column for you but sent it over the day you left and called me to find out if I'd received it before his messenger reached your office. Some man! Not only writes hit plays but has a voice that plays on a girl's heart-strings over the phone. What is he like, really?

* * * *

NOW TAKE Lilly Rose. He must be frightfully busy trying to make a living . . . and in spite of all the effort it must take for this great little man with so many big irons in the fire to keep cool these hot days, he took time out to go to bat for you. The piece he wrote proves again that no matter what he might decide to do, he handles it like a master.

THESE ARE your friends . . . They filled the gap for you when you were beyond reach and blissfully unaware that your poor slavegirl is literally tearing out her platinum locks by the handful trying to figure out a way to fill the Lyons Den, to your credit, and to the satisfaction of the powers that be. I've made call after telephone call, pleading in vain with secretaries to be allowed to speak with this friend or that.

* * * *

BEFORE I FORGET—this is very funny. Some of your press agent friends, who would rather read you than the Bible, or Shakespeare, or Ulysses . . . Days after you had sailed I couldn't do any work at all—well, not much, anyway—because I was kept busy explaining to your friends, the press agents, that you couldn't use their stale stories and ancient gags—you were on the high seas . . . I almost died laughing to hear them stutter and stammer and assure me that this was the first column of yours that they had ever missed reading—the one in which you let the world know that you were taking your lady fair for a European vacation, sailing on the Normandie. I promised not to give them away when you return. So forget I said this. I won't tell any one.

* * * *

I HOPE Mrs. Lyons and yourself will have a wonderful and interesting vacation and, although I don't expect any souvenirs, my heart is strong, so . . . if you are planning a pleasant surprise for me, you need not fear . . . I can stand a good shock . . . just so it's a pleasant one. Sincerely,

ETHEL E. AMSEL.

The Roadside.

Ring out the cowbells! Strike up the anvils and clang the horseshoes! The Roadsiders are in the Groove!

It's not only "The Miner's Daughter"—Lizzie May Elwyn's play of 1888—with which the "meller" players score this week, but it's the ripping old ballad, "The Fatal Wedding," sung by as solemn-faced a quartet as ever enlivened an entr'acte that's the hit of the fortnight which opened last night out on the Rockville pike.

The play is smack in the Roadside tradition, with condemning papers, unhappy marriages, midnight meetings and the most villainous villain ever hissed in any hayseed playhouse. Farmer Mason once killed his partner. ("Oh, that I had died after tasting that glass of wine.) To save himself from the law he had run away with his family and partner's daughter, Sunbeam. ("Oh, dear, kind father!") Now they are living a happy quasi-plantation life when the villain rears his oily locks and, learning the secret demands Sunbeam in marrage. ("Back . . . do not touch me. I can better endure the coils of a snake.") Legally ambitious brother cannot understand, but dearest friend Winnifred can ("Merciful heavens! Richard Thornley!") Most mystified is earnest medical student Royal Meadows ("sneaking country pill vender").

The aforementioned quartette, between acts two and three, is tops. Frances Brunt, Betty Gray, Edward Stevlingson and Norman Rose sing with gestures galore and the deadpan expressions which the Roadsiders have patiently developed into a fine art.

Norman Rose plays the villain to the last stroke of his moustachios. Betty Gray, as Sunshine, sighs like the willows, and Frances Brunt, as the tricked Winnifred, glides like our favorite Venetian gondola. Edward Stevlingson's first heroic entrance is a dreamy wow and Pryor McFadden has a swell "All alone?" remark. Ralph Fowler, discarding his former villainies completely, is father farmer with James Crawford, programmed as Master, having an appetite for food and curiosity. Edward Baggs, Rhodes K. Scherer, Eugene Dunne, Alice Tams Ruffner, Betty Rice and LaVerne Guild complete the cast.

Capacity House Greets Opening Of New Theater

Elissa Landi Is the Star of Inaugural Bill at The Olney.

By Nelson B. Bell

"THE LADY HAS A HEART," Stephen Cochran presents Edward Roberts' English adaptation of Ladislaus Bus-Fekete's Hungarian comedy, in three acts and four scenes. Directed by George Vivian; settings by Charles Squires. At the Olney Theater.

THE CAST

Klari	Jacqueline Brundage
Jean	Leslie Denison
Countess Mariassy	Zoyla Talma
Countess Katinka	Elissa Landi
Count Albert Mariassy	Gordon Richards
Count Gyorgy	Howard Ferguson
Radio Announcer	Norman Stuart
Ilonka	Elizabeth Ray Williams

Set in a picturesque grove of magnificent old oak trees, with spacious driveways leading to its entrance and abundant space for parking cars, Stephen E. Cochran's new Olney Theater last night opened its initial season as "The South's first professional summer playhouse" to an overflow audience, with Elissa Landi in Bus-Fekete's Hungarian comedy, "The Lady Has a Heart."

Last night's inaugural was in every respect an auspicious occasion, marking the successful culmination of long and carefully laid plans by Impresario Cochran. The festivities were begun as early as 6:30 by the signing of the memorial oak that grows through the lobby of the Olney by Elissa Landi, star of its first attraction, who was to score later in the first performance in what will speedily be recognized as the most commodious and most beautifully located hot-weather home of the drama anywhere within a wide radius of the National Capital.

First-night patrons thronged the grounds in increasing numbers from 6:30 on, inspecting the rustic theater and congratulating Mr. Cochran upon his perspicacity in having chosen such an ideal site for his new footlight venture. They found the one-floor theater not quite completed to the last detail, but a well-seated and comfortable structure capable of seating approximately 450 people; the stage of sufficient dimensions to accommodate satisfactorily any but the most cumbersome plays.

Play Was Filmed.

"The Lady Has a Heart," the initial bill, may be most readily identified in the theatergoing mind as the comedy upon which the screen play of "The Baroness and the Butler" was based. It relates the interesting and mildly satiric story of the serving man in the home of the prime minister, who himself entered politics in opposition to the Conservative Party, of which his master was head, only to find himself unexpectedly elected to the House of Deputies while still retaining his post as valet to the dignitary whose government he was destined eventually to overthrow.

A romantic, as well as political, aspect is lent the play by the class consciousness of the Premier's daughter, who perceives in the surprisingly well-versed butler a more potent figure than the ineffectual political nonentity who is her husband. The four scenes of the three acts are uniformly sound in their exposition of the socialist-conservative conflict and at times are briskly amusing in the deft turning of phrases between the opposing parties, both political and romantic.

The piece was run off last evening with remarkable smoothness for a first night, although the between-scenes wait in the second act seemed a trifle long and it was evident, now and again, that a little longer association will redound to the benefit of both cast and comedy.

The roles which gave the film play its name are skillfully portrayed by Elissa Landi and Leslie Denison, both of whom bring a degree of polish and finesse to characters that could not be found outside of the aristocracy of any country. Miss Landi read her vituperative speeches with great warmth and imbued her more generous momentts with appealing gentleness and charm. Mr. Denison contrived to be both butler and legislator with equal effectiveness, combining frigid austerity with a lively controversial spirit as the requirements of the duality of his role demanded.

Stars Capably Supported.

Gordon Richards and Zoyla Talma provided a substantial background for the romance and the comedy, as the Count and Countess Mariassy, and Howard Ferguson left no doubt as to where the superiority lay in the political arena as between himself and the glorified butler, who bested him romantically as well as in the halls of Parliament.

The costumes and settings were of metropolitan midseason beauty and tastefulness and about the whole proceedings there hovered an air of professionallsm quite comparable to that of any "first night."

The Olney is not in any sense a "barn theater," although it is of simple and unembellished design and as yet unpainted and, as already intimated, uncompleted in its minor details. Last night's capacity audience accepted it as a valuable and a welcome addition to Washington's sources of summer entertainment. With the stars already announced, and those yet to be articled, it would make history in a distinctly new field of local endeavor during the "straw hat" season—and beyond.

Congratulations to all concerned.

X-Rayed Star.

Myrna Loy was X-rayed seven times for a laboratory scene with Clark Gable and Walter Pidgeon in "Too Hot to Handle."

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., July 25.—During their lunch hour—too busy to get it any other time—Claire Trevor and Clark Andrews, together with police escort, got their license to marry on the same day that Joan Crawford and Franchot Tone called the whole thing off. Looks now as though there's nothing in the way of Tone's going back to his first love, the stage. Claire Trevor was asked what stars would be her bridesmaids. She said, "This is my wedding, not an 'A' production."

HEDDA HOPPER

Lupe Velez still sustains her flair for comedy by saying, "I love Johnny and he loves me . . . we're both much happier apart."

But Clifford Odets, fiery but honest, says, "In the relationship with women, all men have violent tempers."

I asked Warner Baxter how he remained happily married for seventeen years.

"You've got to figure out what you want," he said, "thrills or companionship. If they go hand in hand, you're in clover, but it's companionship which endures through the years."

Now that Charlie McCarthy has placed his footprints in the forecourt of the Chinese Theater, along with other famous folk, why not Snow White and the paws of Buck, and Asta, who's doing a picture in England while waiting for "The Thin Man."

August 11 is the date. Beverly Hills Hotel is the place. You'd better hurry or you won't get in, if you want to watch Hollywood going to the dogs. Bette Davis and the Tailwaggers have given us the best reason for a party in years. Poets and peasants have long written about man's best friend.

And here's how you can make a little boy happy on his birthday, August 9, by answering the letter from Mrs. E. J. Kemin, 354 West Avenue, 42d street, Los Angeles. Last week the beloved Scottie of her son, Frank, aged 7, was run over and killed. So if you know of another, not too expensive, this family of five would bless you.

The reason Dr. Dafoe keeps changing the nurses who look after the quints is because they become bitten by that bug—overwhelming desire for possession, then it's time to say good-by. If he writes a book "How to Bring Up Babies," it would sell faster than "Gone With the Wind."

His ideas and execution are things mothers are too tired to think of let alone practice.

The quints are going to be very surprised when they grow up to find out about baby talk—they've never heard it.

Too bad Samuel Insull had to pass away in the subway with 84 cents in his pocket before some would believe he was a poor man. He never resented the ingratitude of man and once said, without bitterness, that out of 30,000 he helped financially, only two repaid their original loans. And he once told Tito Schipa, "I'll always remember your kindness to me when I could be of no assistance to you."

The last years of his life, I understand, were spent writing his autobiography containing names, dates and facts. And when it's published, I predict you'll remember only that Samuel Insull was a great man. Here's hoping they'll do him justice when they make his story into a picture.

George O'Brien in "Garden of The Moon," uses every actor's trick and all the wiles of mankind and turns out a riotous performance.

They've got a find in John Payne. I believe he was under contract to Warner Brothers once before and they let him go. Jerry Colanna, of the twirling eyes and dropping handlebars, is simply grand. But they wasted that fine actor, Melville Cooper.

As for Jimmy Fidler, who plays himself, relaying gossip—I mean gospel—truth, he revealed a charm of personality that will get him lots of new fans, not that he needs them, heaven knows.

Got Their Goat!

MARTHA RAYE,

who hereafter will be known as a "glamour girl," as she appears in "Give Me a Sailor," her next Paramount vehicle.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Star Gazing.

Somewhere in West Virginia, July 25.—"And another thing," said Stanley Raymond Harris, bethinking himself . . . "You've got to give Wes Ferrell credit. No matter what else they may say about him, he never blames anybody but himself when he loses a ball game.

POVICH.

Lolling in his Pullman berth, the Nats manager was talking about his ball team, headed West for another three weeks' journey. As he scanned the same old faces he wished silently, no doubt, that many of 'em were begone instead of merely woebegone. Harris could do better with certain other athletes, particularly certain other pitchers.

He had been talking about Wes Ferrell, naturally enough. Because Ferrell almost always causes talk. If he isn't pitching a brilliant game, he's pitching one of the worst games ever committed. And the chances are that in either case he has indulged in one of his temperamental tantrums on the mound or in the dugout.

No stranger character ever drew pay from a big league club than the tall, handsome pitcher whose facial features have captivated Hollywood scouts and caused talk of film contracts. But talk of film contracts ceased suddenly when they heard Wes Ferrell's North Carolina drawl. Movie audiences like their big handsome men with big handsome voices, not the plaintive hill-billy stuff.

He's as unpredictable as his pitching. And he knows it. He freely admits that his fortunes are governed by the stars. Astrology rules his life. He is a confirmed disciple and credits astrology with curing the soreness in his arm when all other methods failed, including the ministration of medical and bone specialists, quacks and voodoo doctors.

On the days the stars say they are in his favor he will be the picture of confidence on the pitching mound. He says that several years ago when he was with Cleveland he had his horoscope read and a re-check of his season's victories revealed that he had won ball games on days when the stars were favorable and had lost games when, according to the horoscope, the days were due to be "bad."

He makes no bones about his faith in astrology. He points out that it was more than a coincidence two years ago at Griffith Stadium when, on the same day, Joe Cronin was beaned and Rick Ferrell suffered a broken finger. "It was a bad day for people born on the sign of Libra," said Wes, "and the chart showed it. Both Cronin and Rick were Libra babies."

Knows His Curves.

On the days he is pitching to Brother Rick, when the horoscope shows the day to be in his favor, he has complete faith in his own judgment of what to pitch to the hitters. If Brother Rick's signs coincide with his own ideas of the proper pitch, that is well and good. If not, he shakes Rick off and insists on pitching what he likes.

For the past five years he's had a so-called dead arm and both hitters and fans throughout the league are well aware of it. But Ferrell flies into a rage when he is labeled a "nothing-ball pitcher." He asks "Why do people say that, confound it? I'm sick of hearing about that nothing-ball."

But he's been getting by with slow curves and his control for years. Once, twice during a game, perhaps, he cuts loose with something akin to the fast ball he owned in his rookie days, but it's a desperate effort, usually followed by a twinge of pain in his shoulder. But he's been getting by nicely. To date he has 12 victories and only three pitchers in the American League have that many. He is the only Washington pitcher with even a faint chance to win 20 games this season.

To the fan who doesn't delight in watching a pitcher blow down the opposition with his speed, Ferrell is a treat to watch on his good days. He's pitching chiefly with his head out there on the mound. Necessity long ago caused him to pay more strict attention to the batters' weaknesses and no pitcher in the league is as particular about pitching to certain spots. And, bereft of his speed, he has improvised in other ways. Those queer moves and twists he makes before delivering the ball are not exactly wasted effort. There is deception in every one of them. He is getting the hitter off balance, and concealing as best he can the type of pitch he's going to throw.

Expensive Temper.

He thinks it his own perfect right to fly into a rage if the game goes against him. In his time he has torn up a dozen new gloves, finger by finger, at the cost of six bucks per glove. One day last season after being knocked from the box and driven to an early shower, he was still fuming after donning his street clothes. Suddenly jerking his watch from his wrist, he flung it viciously against the wall.

Strangely, the watch did not burst. As it fell to the floor in one piece, a clubhouse boy dashed over to pick it up.

"Leave that watch alone!" shouted Ferrell. And as the startled clubhouse boy drew back in fright, Wes rushed over to the wall and with both feet ground the timepiece into bits.

"Watch him out there sometimes," Bucky Harris was saying. When somebody makes an error behind Wes, you'll see him fuming. But he won't be mad at the guy who made the error. He won't stand out there with his hands on his hips glaring at the poor fellow like Earl Whitehill used to do. He never shows any of his teammates up. He just gets mad at himself. You can't hate a fellow like that."

Queen Helen Comes Home

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Wearing orchids and in an unusually pleasant mood, Helen Wills arrived in New York today from England, where she recently won her eighth Wimbledon championship by defeating Helen Jacobs. Of her rival she said: "There is no rivalry between us except when we get on that tennis court."

Helen Wills Seeks Eighth U. S. Crown

'Battle of Helens' Seen at Forest Hills in September.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 25.—Helen Wills Moody, as amiable and gracious as a tennis queen should be, returned from England today and said she will seek her eighth U. S. singles crown, to add to her eight Wimbledon titles, in the national championships September 8-17 at Forest Hills.

She also will compete in mixed doubles in the national doubles at Brookline August 22-27, and also expects to enter the Essex County Club invitation starting at Manchester, Mass., August 15.

There is a possibility, therefore, of two more "battles of the Helens" before the season is over. Helen Jacobs, who lost to Mrs. Moody in the Wimbledon final after turning her ankle, already has said she will enter the Essex County tourney. Miss Jacobs also is entered in the nationals.

Denies Ill Feeling.

Mrs. Moody denied that there was any ill feeling between her and her California neighbor.

"In all sports, people like to imagine there is more to a rivalry than merely a match between two players," she said. "In earlier days they tried to build up a feud between Suzanne Lenglen and Molla Mallory, didn't they?"

"They must have been taken as we started to leave the net," said the 33-year-old Californian. "I saw a number of them in the London papers in which we were looking directly at each other."

Mrs. Moody felt she was not in a position to say whether Miss Jacobs should have withdrawn after her injury instead of playing out the match, which Mrs. Moody won, 6—4, 6—0.

"After all," said the woman who holds the record for winning Wimbledon championships, "that's something a person must decide for himself. We really had played a very nice first set, and it was a shame the match had to end the way it did.

Tells of Injury.

"My own game? I really can't say whether it's as good as it ever was. That's something the people on the sidelines will have to judge."

For the next week, which she will spend in New York, Helen won't play any tennis, partly because she had seven weeks of tournaments and Wightman Cup play abroad and partly because she injured her back slightly while packing for the trip home.

"But the injury really is nothing," she added with a smile. "I merely can feel a slight twinge now and then."

Forest Hills, with a strong foreign contingent including last year's runner-up, Jadwiga Jedrzejowska, of Poland, should furnish some fine competition, she feels. Asked if she were looking forward to another meeting with Miss Jacobs, whom she has played some 20 times, Helen said:

"I hope to meet as many players as possible."

She parried all questions regarding a reported romance with Capt. Victor Cazalet, British member of Parliament. Said Helen:

"I won't answer any questions about a future marriage. If I had any plans, I would announce them —probably."

Wins Twelfth Straight.

The Landover Athletic Club nine captured its twelfth consecutive win by downing Fairlawn, 9-1, yesterday. Huck Beall pitched steady ball while Quade and Shaffner led the batting attack.

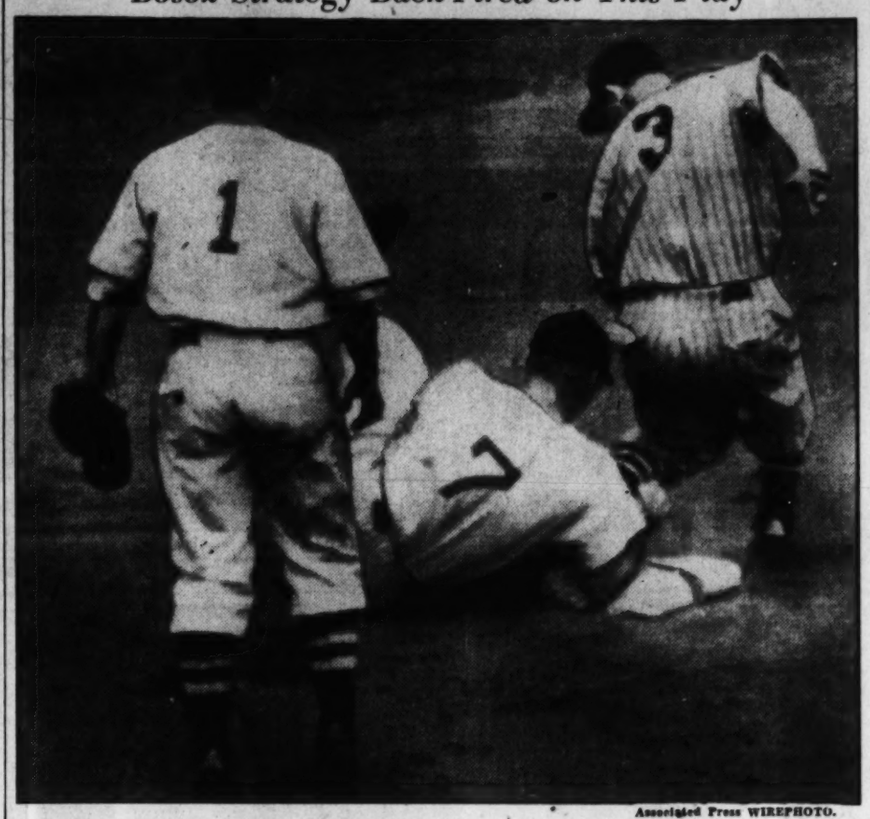
Bosox Strategy Back-Fired on This Play



Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Earl Averill (3), Cleveland outfielder, scurried safely back to second on this play in the second inning yesterday. Joe Vosmik (7), Red Sox leftfielder, who had come in to back up the bag, is attempting to tag him as Bobby Doerr (1), of Sox, looks on. The play came when Averill overran second after Higgins, Sox third baseman, dropped his infield fly.

Harris Says Zeke Is O.K.

Bonura Appears to Be Out of Slump.

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

En Route to Detroit, July 25.—The 210-pound figure of John Henry Bonura bulks large in the future of the Nats as they roll Westward for a 16-game swing around the circuit.

Manager Bucky Harris is now permitting himself the notion that Big Zeke is finally ready to assume his rightful place in the Nats' lineup after more than three months of a seemingly futile struggle with a batting slump.

With the Nats' pitching requiring a maximum number of runs to guarantee any respectable degree of success, Harris is on the point of abandoning his alternate first basemen strategy and impressing Bonura into regular service.

Jimmy Wasdell's utter failure to lend any power to the Nats' attack finds Bonura again the fair-haired first baseman of the Nats. The tide has definitely changed in the struggle for the first base job and Bonura again is in the ascendancy.

Big Zeke's recent batting displays have re-established him in Harris' favor. Bonura has not been getting any abnormal number of hits, but he has been meeting the ball solidly nevertheless.

"He looks to me like he's out of his slump," said Harris. "A fellow can't keep banging the ball the way Zeke has been and not get a fair share of hits. He's been hitting the ball on the nose and swinging with his old confidence. Away from Griffith Stadium he'll have those closer fences to shoot for.

"One thing about Bonura, we know. Zeke always could hit. We don't know that about Wasdell, yet. Jimmy may come along, but in a time like this we can't sacrifice any batting strength. If Zeke is out of his lump, I want to find out in a hurry. It would do this team a powerful lot of good."

Harris intimated that he is prepared to use Bonura against both left and right-handed pitching.

For tomorrow's series opener against the Tigers, Harris will send Wes Ferrell to the mound. Ferrell has had varying fortunes against the Tigers. In one of his starts, he held the Tigers to five hits, striking out Rudy York four times. In another, he couldn't hold a 11-1 lead against Detroit and lost the game eventually, 18-12.

Their current journey into the West looms as the Nats' most important trip of the year. Despite

Jack Jurich Wins Battle in England

Manchester, England, July 25 (AP). Jackie Jurich, American flyweight from San Jose, Calif., easily outpointed Phil Milligan, of England, in a ten-round bout tonight.

In his first bout in Britain, Jurich was knocked out by Benny Lynch after Lynch had been stripped of the flyweight title for failure to make the weight limit for the bout.

Carlton Rood Beats Buxby

Scores Only Upset in Net Play at Sea Bright.

By the Associated Press.

Sea Bright, N. J., July 25.—Seeded players advanced without exception and only one upset was recorded today as first round matches substantially reduced the field of 48 men and 32 women competitors in the fifty-first renewal of the Sea Bright Invitation Tennis tournament.

Led by Alice Marble, of San Francisco, who is seeking her third consecutive championship and permanent possession of the historic Sea Bright Bowl, favored performers came through without undue difficulty.

The lone upset in the singles play came when Martin Buxby, of Miami, Fla., sixteenth ranking American, was eliminated by unseeded and unranked Carlton Rood, of Brooklyn. Rood, who put out Frank Shields two weeks ago at Spring Lake, won, 1—6, 9—7, 6—2.

Buxby had been drawn against Barney Welsh, of Rockville, Md., but when he could not apepar, Rood, a University of North Carolina player, was substituted.

With top-seeded Bobby Riggs occupied with a final at Longwood, Frank Parker, seeded second in the men's field, drew the feature spot with a 6—2, 6—3 triumph over William Robertson, of Los Angeles. Bryan M. (Bitsy) Grant, jr., tiny Atlanta, Ga., star, who is rated behind Parker, was extended to overcome the challenge of lanky Alfred Jarvis. Williams College netman from Tenafly, N. J. Jarvis held a 5—3 advantage in the opening set before going down to defeat before Grant's all-around court craft. The scores were 9—7, 6—4.

Riggs, Harold Surface, of Kansas City, and Joe Hunt, husky University of Southern California athlete, did not see action in the singles, having drawn byes into the second round, which starts tomorrow. The sixth seeded man, Donald McNeill, of Oklahoma City and Kenyon College, withdrew because of an injured right ankle. McNeill's place in the draw was taken by George Toley, former University of Miami player, who won his first match by 6—1, 6—3 over J. Upshur Moorhead of the host club.

Miss Marble displayed great all-around strength in her first tournament since her return from Europe with the Wightman Cup squad. She polished off Jean Burritt, an experienced Canadian who has

Tribe Gets Only 3 Hits Off Dickman

Allen Allows 5 Blows, Loses, 4 to 0; Harder Wins 2d, 3 to 0.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, July 25.—After two pitching duels, the Indians and Red Sox remained just where they were before they started today's doubleheader—Cleveland in second place a game back of the Yankees and Boston in third position another game and a half to the rear.

The Red Sox won the opener, 4-0, as Rookie Emerson Dickman outpitched the veteran Johnny Allen, who, after winning 12 straight, suffered his second setback of the season and his third in 30 games over two years. Mel Harder outpointed young Jim Bagby, however, 3-0, in the nightcap to give the Indians an even break.

Dickman held the Indians to three hits for his fifth victory as against two defeats. Earl Averill got to him for a scratch double in the second and that was all until Hal Trosky also doubled in the eighth. Sammy Hale got the other blow, a single in the ninth.

Allen himself yielded only five hits before he was replaced by Bill Zuber at the start of the eighth. One of the blows was Jimmy Foxx's twenty-seventh homer in the sixth after the Sox had scored once in the second on Higgins' double and Doerr's single and twice in the fifth on a walk, Higgins' single, Ken Keltner's error, and a fielder's choice.

Harder limited the Sox to five hits while the Indians were making the most of six off young Bagby, who fanned nine. Bagby had the misfortune, however, to pitch a home-run ball to Keltner in the third, his seventeenth homer of the year. In the sixth, Thomas Heath tripled and scored on Averill's fly. The Tribe counted again in the ninth on Heath's infield single and Keltner's double.

Tony Galento Is Improving

By the Associated Press.

Orange, N. J., July 25.—Tony Galento showed definite improvement today in his fight against bronchial pneumonia and talked about fight wars to come.

His doctors said his temperature was lower, and his general condition good and the always talkative Galento, No. 1 heavyweight title challenger, showed it.

Rallying after being given two blood transfusions yesterday and a "pep talk" by his manager, Joe Jacobs, Galento wanted to know when he could get out of bed and whether he could fight John Henry Lewis, light-heavyweight champion, or Max Baer in September.

Tony instructed his wife, Mary, who brought a fresh supply of home-made chicken broth to his bedside in Orange Memorial Hospital, to refund $2,500 worth of tickets he sold to friends for the Lewis bout, which was to have been held in Philadelphia tomorrow night.

Galento's temperature dropped today to 103.2 from yesterday's high of 105.6, and Dr. Joseph Higi, his personal physician, said:

"His general condition is good; temperature slightly lower. Strength is being satisfactorily maintained and there is no evidence of complications."

Galento's sense of humor also returned. Referring to the transfusions, he said:

"They've got me so full of holes now, I look like a free ticket to a fight."

Reid and Lee Fight Tonight If Rain Stops

Bout Scheduled for Last Night Postponed on Account of Downpour; Entire Card Is Carried Over; New Yorker Favorite.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Messrs. Joe Turner and Goldie Ahearn, Washington's lone fistic promotorial firm, hopefully finished the second verse of "It Ain't Gonna Rain No More," glanced out the office window and promptly postponed last night's boxing show featuring Al Reid and Paul Lee until tonight. The reason? It rained.

The entire card will be held over. Reid, who scaled 125¼ pounds at official weighing-in ceremonies yesterday, continues to rule an 8-5 choice over Lee, who came in a half pound heavier.

Meanwhile, rumors were wafted around boxing commission headquarters that Tony Canzoneri, former lightweight champion of the world who is attempting a comeback, will fight in Washington the latter part of August.

Tough Tony, it was reported, will face Lou Gevinson or Norment Quarles in a 10-round bout. Gevinson and Quarles were supposed to clash next week in the main event, but the Washington boy pulled out of the engagement because of an injured shoulder.

Canzoneri, once one of the fiercest of fighting men, is but a hollow shell of his former self but reputedly still packs a potent wallop in his right hand. He is training diligently at his farm in up-State New York where he has maintained a residence during the past year, and reports himself in excellent condition.

"Meanwhile, Gevinson must fight Quarles before he will be permitted to accept any other offers. The Southwest socker would like to avoid the former intercollegiate champion who is poison to southpaws. Quarles has beaten the best left-handers in the business and figures to put Gevinson to sleep if and when they meet.

Next week's top attraction will be furnished by Ivan Nedomatsky and Steve Mamakos, the pair Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn has been trying to bring together since last winter. They were matched on two occasions, but in each instance the Baltimore belter was obliged to withdraw because of a fractured thumb.

Nedo, however, has long since recovered and is tugging at the leash to get at the Greek. Mamakos has four consecutive victories under his belt and will have ample financial and moral support even though Nedomatsky will be a pronounced favorite.

Illinois Board Refuses To Lift Adamick Ban.

Joe Triner, chairman of the commission, said evidence Adamick and his manager, James Brady, offered was similar to that presented at the previous hearing, at which Trammel also was suspended.

Remember Ardmore? And Where Was Eggleston When the Lights Went Out?

By Lewis F. Atchison.

"Ardmore," the pudgy gent in light-striped trousers was saying, "Ardmore, why they shoulda burned down the joint sooner. I fought Andy Bowen in the last fight ever held there. He got the decision and I got a black eye. The next day I'm at a turkish bath recuperating and somebody comes in and yells, 'Hey, they boined down Ardmore last night.' Phooy, they should've burned it down the night before I met that guy."

The pudgy gent, as you have guessed, no doubt, was Goldie Ahearn, and he was recalling one of the more glamorous chapters in the history of a little fight club pitched in the scrub-pine of Maryland not so many years ago. Goldie fought there several times and relates some rich anecdotes of the place, but there was another Ardmore veteran in the little audience in Joe Turner's office—George King.

George is fat and fortyish now, content with his dogs and gun and fishing tackle, but there was a time when he was one of boxing's big figures, locally.

"That was some place," he grinned. "Way back in the woods—about a half-mile from the train. I'd ride out on the first car and have to hop off and run through the woods ahead of the crowd to open up the box-office. Then, after selling the tickets, I'd put the cash in a little black bag and hustle back to the dressing room to get the fighters ready. Sure, I did everything, and I used to pay 'em off in quarters. They'd get $10 or $12 and think they had a fortune—the preliminary boys, I mean.

"The club itself was nothing more than an old house. Dick Mansfield, you know him, the captain at No. 9 Precinct now? Well, Dick Mansfield first promoted there, and when he dropped it I picked it up. In those days anybody who could line up a card could promote a show at Ardmore. Lots of times I'd get a couple of fellows into a fight on the street and then sign 'em up to settle it at Ardmore.

"Well, the house wasn't much itself. Blackboards on the walls and a lot of other reminders of its schoolhouse days. Mansfield—he's quite an artist, you know, had pictures drawn on the blackboards the first time he put a fight on. There were two stoves in the place —and in the winter it got cold as a banker's heart. They were big stoves, one in each main aisle and it was kinda funny to see the crowd hopping back and forth between the stoves and the ring. When the bell would ring ending a rounding they'd all run over to the stoves and warm their hands, and when it rang again they'd run back to watch the bout. Oh, it was funny at times."

Sort of a no man's land, we suggested.

"Supposed to be, but you know we used to have lots of women disguised in men's clothes coming out there. Yessir, they'd put on the pants and everything to see a fight. Real fans they were.

"Not changing the subject, but I'll tell you a funny thing that happened out there one night. You know "Bat" Woodson whose on the boxing commission now? Well, he was fighting "Jumbo" Eggleston in the feature bout. They were light heavyweights. I bet Morris Cafritz $20 that Eggleston would win—he took Woodman. They came out for the first round and Woodman hit Eggleston a terrific clip on the chin, and 'Jumbo" went down. The referee, I forget who it was started to count, when all of a sudden somebody cut the light wires. I'm telling you there was hell to pay for a few minutes.

"When the lights came on both boys were on their stools in the corners, so they rang the bell for the second round. This time Eggleston caught Woodman and he really put the chill on him. Cafritz felt he had been robbed—and I guess he was, but they called Eggleston the winner and I collected. No, no, I didn't have anything to do with cutting the lights.

"You know," interrupted Ahearn, "the best fights they ever had out there were between featherweights and lightweights, and it's been the same with fights in general around Washington. The best fighters and biggest box-office attractions have been small men.

"Listen, there was me, Andy Bowen, Al Foreman, Honey Boy Finnegan, Kid Egan, "Rat" Thomas, Kid Sullivan, Danny O'Brien, Shanky Gardner, Frankie Covelli, Pete DeGrasse, Joey Archibald, Al Reid and, well, you know some of the boys who've come along recently.

"And don't forget Charley Holman, a good-looking blond kid—he fought at Ardmore and later died of injuries suffered in a fight with Lou Myers at Baltimore. Charley was a brother of Jesse Holman, runner-up fr the A. E. F. lightweight title in France. But, you see, all the good fights have been made by the lighter boys.

"And that reminds me, this featherweight tournament we're putting on . . ."

And that reminded us we had to be on our way. Good old Ardmore. Them was the daze.

Baby Sweep, Carrying $7.80 Ticket, Wins Feature at Rockingham

Sun Antioch Takes Place, Pays $4.02

Learned Grabs the Show Spot at Price of $5.82 to $2.

By the Associated Press.

Salem, N. H., July 25.—Getting up in the final stride, F. Mallory's Baby Sweep today won a nose decision over $2,000 platers to pay $7.08 of an all claiming card at Rockingham Park.

In second place was F. J. Vollmer's Sun Antioch, that paid $4.02 to place after leading all the way. A length and a half further back was D. J. Sullivan's Learned that returned $5.82 to show.

Sun Antioch broke on top and going into the far turn had built up a lead of 3½ lengths with Mrs. Danny Shea's Free Again offering most of the contention. At this point Golden Thoughts was in third place with Upside Down close at hand, although neither was to be in the money in the final drive to the wire.

Coming down the stretch it was evident that Sun Antioch was tiring rapidly and Jockey Eddie Robart, of Pawtucket, who recently rode his first winner here, applied the whip vigorously in an effort to hold the lead he had piled up. But the winner was coming with a terrific rush under a rousing ride by J. Littrell and the photo finish showed him a nose the best, a margin he collected in the final jump at the wire.

Baby Sweep was scoring his second straight victory here in 12 starts. His last was scored over $1,500 claiming company here July 21. The 6-year-old son of Sweep was timed in 1:13.3 over a drying out track designated as slow.

Eight Thirty Wins At Saratoga; Pays 16-5.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., July 25 (AP).—Blazing the fastest 5½ furlongs in the 64 runnings of the stake, George Widener's unbeaten 2-year-old, Eight Thirty, today won the Flash Stakes, which annually headlines the opening program of this town's historic track.

Eight Thirty, victor in two previous races at Delaware Park, stepped to the distance in 1:05 1-5, the best time since Billy Kelly's 1:05 3-5 back in 1918. The time, however, was three-fifths of a second slower than Tuscaloosa's track mark.

A short head behind the Widener colt came DeWitt Page's Maeline, which just missed giving the owner of the Maemere Farm his third successive success in the fixture. Third money went to Hugh W. Jackson's Ariel Toy, which trailed by three lengths.

William Woodward's Johnstown, making his first start since an impressive score at Jamaica in the spring, finished fourth in the role of a 13-to-5 favorite. Sea Captain, from Mrs. H. C. Phipps' Wheatley Stable and coupled with Johnstown as the Trainer James Fitzsimmons entry, was nosed out by his partner. Back of them trailed 10 other juveniles.

Eight Thirty ran as an entry with Birch Rod and the combination paid 16 to 5. The winner's share of the purse was $4,775.

Maeline broke from the gate in front and opened up a length and a half advantage over Eight Thirty after the pair had drawn clear of the others in the first furlong. It was a two-horse race from there on.

An 18-year-old track record fell in the seven furlongs of the $2,000 American Legion Handicap when A. G. Vanderbilt's Airflame reeled off the distance in 1:23 1-5. The time clipped two-fifths of a second from Milkmaid's mark, made in 1920.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CURRANTS, $5.42, $3.16, $2.58; APPREHEND, $4.06, $2.86; COL. GREENOCK, $3.28.

CURRANTS, in the forefront throughout, went into an easy lead when BROADKILL began tiring and drew out to win with speed in reserve. APPREHEND, hard ridden holding to a forward position, continued with good energy to the end. COL. GREENOCK dropped back after rounding the far turn, but, responding willingly to punishment, was along in the last sixteenth to wear down BROADKILL. The latter had speed from the start retiring steadily in the last three-sixteenths.

SECOND RACE—One mile. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:58. Off at 3:01. Winner, E. A. McMann's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WHIPPERCRACKER, $9.22, $4.66, $3.56; RAMUS, $16.14, $9.16; MILLIMETER, $9.18.

WHIPPERCRACKER was forced to take up soon after the start, began working his way up on the inside down the backstretch and, overhauling RAMUS after reaching the stretch, drew out and was clear at the line. RAMUS moved up fast after reaching the backstretch, disposed of BOBB CHARLIE for the lead and, despite holding on willingly, was unable to go along with the winner when challenged. MILLIMETER was forwardly placed all the way and held on with good energy to the close. GARDEN MESSAGE, unable to keep pace early, began working his way up in the last 3 furlongs and, while closing some ground, was never in position to threaten the leaders.

Daily Double, Currants and Whippercracker, Paid $22.16.

THIRD RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:25. Off at 3:29½. Winner, Mrs. J. Walker's br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MAJOR B., $113.10, $28.04, $9.14; FERDINAND, $4.78, $3.28; LITTLE DEMON, $3.60.

MAJOR B. displayed good speed from the start, disputed the command with FERDINAND during the first half mile, drawing out steadily through the last furlong. FERDINAND had speed from the outset, faltered through the last furlong and barely lasted long enough to withstand the placing bid of LITTLE DEMON. The latter, away fast, dropped back steadily in the closing five-sixteenths and, responding gamely to punishment through the stretch, would probably have been second in a few more strides.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post at 3:55. Off at 3:58½. Winner, Mrs. A. R. Smith's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FROZEN MASK, $6.48, $4.06, $3.04; FEEDMAN, $4.22, $3.22; NIGHT CHASE, $4.34.

FROZEN MASK, under stout restraint while racing in near attendance of the pace for the first half mile, saved ground into the stretch and, disposing of FEEDMAN for the command, drew clear at the line. FEEDMAN, in close pursuit of the pace established by TIME INTERVAL, wore the latter down after reaching the stretch and fought it out gamely to the close. NIGHT CHASE, restrained early, closed with good energy when called upon in the stretch run

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:26. Off at 4:28. Winner, F. Mallory's b. or br. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BABY SWEEP, $7.08, $4.36, $3.06; SUN ANTIOCH, $4.02, $3.22; LEARNED, $5.82.

BABY SWEEP was slow to settle into his best stride, moved up with a rush on the inside leaving the backstretch, came wide when straightening out for the run to the finish and, closing with a rush, was up in the concluding stride. SUN ANTIOCH displayed good speed, opened up a long early lead and, under punishment the entire last sixteenth, just missed. LEARNED, unable to keep pace during the first half mile, moved up fast nearing the stretch and, saving all possible ground, held on willingly although unable to reach the first two.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:57. Off at 4:58½. Winner, Miss M. Manya's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PYTCHLEY, $60.92, $15.16, $5.74; MISS HOLLYWOOD, $3.14, $2.52; EVENING TIME, $2.74.

PYTCHLEY outran his field from the start, opened up a good lead when straightening out on the backstretch and, rated along in front, was under a hard drive the entire last furlong and had enough left to hold MISS HOLLYWOOD safe. The latter, under a stout pull while in near pursuit of the pace, moved up on the outside when nearing the stretch and seemed ready to go to the front at the asking, but was unable to overtake the winner under punishment. EVENING TIME, slow to begin, moved up steadily when reaching the backstretch, loomed up menacingly midway of the turn only to weaken in the last quarter mile.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post at 5:31. Off at 5:33. Winner, F. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BOLD GENERAL, $8.48, $4.92, $3.30; TELLING YOU, $18.46, 8.48; HAPPY FLAG, $3.20.

BOLD GENERAL went to the front at once, opened up a commanding lead and, steadied along in front, was never seriously threatened although ridden out smartly through the last furlong. TELLING YOU moved up steadily when reaching the backstretch and held on willingly to the close. HAPPY FLAG, as usual, trailed her field until the closing 3 furlongs, finishing with a belated rush although never in a position to reach the first two.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 6:05. Off at 6:06. Winner, Mrs. J. H. Two-dollar mutuels paid—JINX, $10.88, $6.76, $4.40; MISS PECAN, $12.46, $8.64; TRAGGAT, $4.60.

JINX went to the front straightening out on the backstretch, lost command to TRAGGAT, again went to the front approaching the half-mile ground, opened up a good lead and was never seriously threatened although under pressure all through the stretch. MISS PECAN, slightly reserved early, began bettering her position in the last 2 furlongs and, closing stoutly, was along in the closing strides to overtake TRAGGAT. The latter had speed from the start and raced prominently the entire trip.

Down In Front

By Richards Vidmer.

New York, July 25.—Don't look now, but I think I know what that strange, unfamiliar, yellow glow is that comes filtering through the heavens every now and then. Of course I may be mistaken, but I'm almost sure that it's what is known as sunshine.

VIDMER.

It's been a long time since I've seen any personally, and I wouldn't trust entirely to my own faulty memory, but I have dug up an old document that was handed down from my grandpappy and in it there is a description of sunshine as he saw it. This light that is beginning to appear seems to fit the description perfectly.

Perhaps that column of protest that I wrote on Sunday carried some weight after all. I really didn't know that it would be heeded so soon, in fact I didn't think anyone would pay any attention to it, but it seems that when I came right out flat-footed against the rain, it stopped. It's really rather appalling sometimes to find out who reads what a fellow writes, and takes seriously what is meant in jest.

For instance, there is W. H. Wallace, who offers an answer to a recently expressed uncertainty as to which came first, the hen or the egg. "It seems altogether probable that you have never really tried to work this question out in a logical way," he writes. "When the word 'the' is used in this way it becames generic in character and may mean any or all chickens and any or all eggs, regardless of by whom produced, which is the key to the problem.

"As you are doubtless aware, it is taught that in the evolution of life on this planet its first form of manifestation was the amoeba, followed by the fishes and after them the reptiles, from which evolved both the birds and the reptiles. It naturally follows that there were eggs in plenty long before there were any chickens, as the latter undeniably are members of the bird kingdom."

And now that that has been cleared up to the satisfaction of everybody, except those who come from Tennessee, we are just as confused as ever, although we never did lose a great deal of sleep over the matter. However, another correspondent, Jerome Peters, is even more confused and seriously wants to know on what basis the percentages are figured in the major league and how in heavens name can a club be half a game ahead or behind another club!

The percentages are figured just like any other percentages, Mr. Peters. You divide the number of games played into the number of games won, carry it out to three decimal places and lo, there you have it.

The difference of half a game may be a little more involved but is quite as easy to figure. For instance, we'll say the Pirates are four games ahead of the Giants, more's the pity. Now if they played each other and the Giants won, the Pirates necessarily would have to lose. Therefore, the difference would be three games, which we hope it soon will be. But if the Giants played, let us say, the Dodgers and won, while the Pirates didn't play anybody the difference would be three and a half games, and there you are.

To figure the game difference between two clubs at a glance, take the number of games the Pirates have won above what they have lost (23) and divide by two (11½). Then take the number of games the Giants have won above the number they have lost (15) and divide by two (7½). The difference in games between the Pirates and the Giants, as you see, is four games.

But while we're on the subject of utter confusion, think of the turf experts who are trying to figure out which is the best 3-year-old of the current campaign. Last year it was quite simple. War Admiral ran away with every big event in which he was entered, including the Derby, the Preakness and the Belmont, but this year almost every 3-year-old seems to have won something.

In the most important events for the age, there have been a whole field of claimants to the title. Stagehand won the Santa Anita Derby and seemed destined for the honors early in the year. Then The Chief captured the Derby trial and Fighting Fox took the Wood Memorial.

These three, along with Bull Lea, which had cracked a track record at Keeneland, came up to the Derby in the spotlight, but Stagehand got sick and the other three were beaten by Lawrin. Next Dauber won the Preakness and further confusion developed when Pasteurized won the Belmont. Then to complicate matters completely, Menow won the Withers and Nedayr the Arlington classic.

If anyone can select the best 3-year-old of the campaign out of that collection, he is a brave man, for it's a cinch there will be seven loud squawks no matter which one he names. He will be in much the same position as Mike Jacobs, who is a little confused himself. He has to find an opponent for Joe Louis and the field from which he must select one seems something less than fertile. No matter whom Mike picks, there are bound to be bellows of rage from a lot of other guys named Joe.

So Uncle Mike has decided to hold an elimination tournament. On the surface this would appear to be the logical thing to do, but these things generally serve only to cause further confusion all around. Not that a lot of prospective fighters aren't always eliminated, but it has been the practice for the public to eliminate the whole bunch after the contests are over, and the promoter is right back where he started—looking for a logical challenger.

Rut Coffey, Yoder Score Practice 72s

Cox, George Diffenbaugh Wins Sweepstakes With 73s.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Congressional's par of 72 was equaled but not broken yesterday as a majority of the entrants in the Maryland Open Championship, scheduled today over the 36-hole route, played practice rounds over the 6,652-yard layout.

Levi Yoder, one of the 25 amateurs entered, and last year's runner-up, Rut Coffey, Winchester, Va., set the pace with par rounds, Yoder with 38-34 and Coffey 37-35.

A pro sweepstakes attracted eight of the entrants and Wiffy Cox, host professional, and George Diffenbaugh, Kenwood, split the prize money by scoring one over regulation 73s. Cox was one over going out and played the back nine in par, while Diffenbaugh, two over with a seven on the long first nine, rallied with a 34.

Al Houghton, four-time champion, and Frank Cunningham, of Burning Tree, were next with 76s, while Ralph Beach had a 77. Other low practice rounds included a 74 by "Scotty" Ross, Capital club entrant, and 75s by Eddie Stevens, assistant pro at Manor, and Virgil Worsham, Chevy Chase.

With the course "long" due to the nine consecutive days of rain, a score of par figures may capture the eighteenth annual event, although Cox figures it will take 142 or better.

Cox shares the favorite's role with Lewis Worsham, Chevy Chase assistant pro, who scored a 67 over the course last Friday; Houghton, winner 1933 through 1936, and Andy Gibson, star of the large Baltimore contingent.

Gene Larkin, Woodmont; Ralph Beach, Suburban, defending champion; Cliff Spencer, Charles Betschler, Hillendale and Fred McLeod, Columbia, are other former champions entered.

George Diffenbaugh, Kenwood mentor, has been playing good golf of late and is ranked as one of the leading contenders. He was runner-up to Houghton on two occasions when the Old Point Comfort, Va., pro won the event. Walter Greiner, Baltimore; Beach and Frank Cunningham also rank among the potential winners.

Yoder, Otto Greiner, Bobby Brownell and Shea top the amateurs that number nearly half the field, and may have a say as to the disposition of the title.

First money is $120, second, $90; third, $60, and fourth, $30. The amateurs will play for suitable awards.

Miss Marble's mates on the Wightman team, Dorothy Bundy and Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, likewise gained the second round without trouble. The former eliminated Louise Raymond of Scarsdale, N. Y., 6—1, 7—5, while Mrs. Fabyan accounted for Edith Clark of Los Angeles without losing a game.

their pitching troubles and various batting slumps, they have been "hanging in there" in fourth place, only 8½ games behind the leader and a comfortable margin ahead of the second division. With a bit better pitching and a bit more hitting . . .

The Tigers are not the same threatening opposition that they have been for the past several seasons. Before they finally succeeded in winning a double-header from the Athletics last Sunday, they had lost seven straight games on what was their worst road trip in seven years.

Victorious in 11 of 15 games in their recent home stand, the Nats enter the West bolstered by the return of Cecil Travis, whose bat was greatly missed during the past ten days. Travis has completely recovered from his spike wound.

Track Stars Feature Meet

Howells, Mozel Ellerbe Run in New York.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 25.—Harley Howells, of Ohio State, and Mozel Ellerbe, of Tuskegee Institute, starred in a twilight track and field meet conducted by the Ancient Order of Hibernians at Macomb's Dam park, this evening.

Howells won the 440-yard run in 48.3 over a fast field. John Borican of Virginia State and the Shore A. C. was second, 8 yards behind Howells, who broke the track record.

Charles Miller, of California U. and the Olympic Club was third, and Charlie Beetham, of Columbus, Ohio, fourth.

Ellerbe, who sails tomorrow with most of the other athletes for competition in Europe, won the 100 and 220-yard dashes, the former in 9.6 the latter in 22.4 around two turns. Clyde Jeffrey finished a foot behind Ellerbe in the 100 and Wilbur Greer, of Michigan State, was second in the furlong.

Blaine Rideout, of North Texas State Teachers, bettered his own track record for the mile when he lowered the standard from 4:16.5 to 4:15.8. Joe Moclair, of the New York A. C., was second, with Joe McCluskey, the meet director, third. Rideout won by ten yards.

Forest Efaw, of Oklahoma A. and M., fought off a stretch challenge by Walter Mehl, of Wisconsin, the national champion, to win the 5,000-meters run in 15:08, and Beetham captured the 880-yard run in 1:59.3 over Sanford Goldberg.

Arnold Nutting, of California U. and the Olympic Club, took the broad jump with a leap of 23 feet 10 inches. Bill Lacefield, of the University of California at Los Angeles, was second with 23 feet 6 inches. Michigan's Bill Watson won the shot put with a heave of 51 feet 7⅝ inches.

Turner Seeks Casey to Meet Winner of Dusek-Olson Bout

Wires Offer of $1,000, or 25% of Net Gate, for Grapple Contest on Stadium Mat.

A bit weary of gazing on the sophomoric talent that has been cluttering up the Griffith Stadium campus in recent weeks, Promoter Joe Turner last night slipped the rubber band off his bankroll and wired a juicy offer to Steve Casey to meet the winner of Thursday night's bout between Ernie Dusek and Cliff Olson.

Mr. Casey, champion of all he surveys on the Bowser circuit, was reached in Boston, and, it is reliably reported, fell off the hamburger stool he was sitting on when Mr. Turner's wire arrived. It said something about offering $1,000 or the privilege of 25 per cent of the net gate receipts. It has been a long time since the Irishman fingered serious sugar and while no reply has been received Turner confidently expects an okay on the match today.

"It's a good offer," Turner commented. "but not too much for a man of Steve's ability. He's a better wrestler than people give him credit for and will give either Dusek or Olson a big evening. "But," he added, evidently remembering his neutral status, "don't be surprised if Casey loses—especially if Ernie gets the shot at him. These two wrestling here Thursday night are the toughest in the game and are liable to whip anybody on a good night."

Much interest has been aroused by the Olson-Dusek brawl coming up Thursday night at the Arena. Dusek scored a surprise win two weeks ago by pinning Danno O'Mahoney, and Olson came through in excellent style against Jack League last week. Although both follow the villain pattern, ordinarily, Olson appears to be a trifle worse than Ernest, who developed a sudden and unexpected passion for clean play the night he tossed O'Mahoney.

The supporting card for Thursday night's show has been completed, meanwhile, with Jack League pitted against Ed White and Bill Middlekauf meeting Mike Mazurki in the last bouts added. Previously signed engagements included Wally Dusek vs. Paul Bosch, and Emil Dusek vs. Ed Meske.

Wildcats Beaten.

The Chevy Chase Red Sox handed the Wildcats a 6-4 defeat on the baseball field at Phoebehurst yesterday as Footer allowed the losers only four hits. Marshall led the batting with three for four.

Grubb Reaches Zenith With Driving Range.

Brooke Grubb, Silver Spring's promoter de luxe, will officially open his new driving range, located on Georgia avenue, above Montgomery Hills, next Saturday night with a show featuring golf pros, pony and mule races, with a little politics on the side.

Brooke has promoted everything frum turtle derbys to battle royals, and a driving range is his latest venture. After an exhibition, the races will take place, with "refreshments" following.

The invited list includes Attorney General Herbert O'Conor, Montgomery County dignitaries, Walter Johnson, golf pros and customers.

If it rains enough between today and Saturday, Brooke has also promised a swimming demonstration in the largest puddle.

Flaherty Off to See About New Sweaters

It is purely coincidental that Sammy Baugh, pass-throwing ace, who is playing baseball in Rochester, and Don Irwin, fullback, who is visiting friends, are both in Rochester. Both are unsigned. Erwin because he disliked the terms offered by the club.

Mel Shorey Tops D. C. Golfers in Meet.

Philadelphia, July 25 (AP).—Three golfers from the Washington district played today in the pro division of the U. S. Salesmen's Golf Tournament at the Paxton Hollow Country Club.

Mel Shorey, of the East Potomac Club, scored at 38, 35—73 for low score of the Washington entrants. Tom Ryan, of Alexandria, Va., scored 39, 37—76 and Tom Doerer, of East Potomac, 40, 39—79.

The tournament ended in a tie between Jimmie D'Angelo, of the Baederwood Club, of Philadelphia, 35, 33—68, and Dick Renaghan, of Moorestown, N. J., 33, 35—68.

Bobby Riggs Wins Crown At Brookline

By the Associated Press.

Brookline, Mass., July 25 (AP).—The second-ranking Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, advanced a step toward his U. S. Davis Cup team goal today by capturing the forty-sixth Longwood Bowl tennis tourament with a one-sided 6—4, 6—0, 6—4 victory over Frank Kovacs, 18-year-old Oakland, Calif., comer.

Both were on a grass court for the first time since last Monday's rained-out opening and Riggs lost little time discovering Kovacs' turf weakness and concentrating against it.

The Californian youngster, who towers 6 feet 4 inches, has had little experience on grass courts and has not trained himself to bend his knees while playing the low bounding shots generated by such a surface.

That handicap was aggravated by the soggy court, for it enabled Riggs to cut his spinning returns much lower than usual, with the result that his stiff-legged opponent batted 30 shots into the net and drove 31 more beyond the lines, while almost matching Riggs' earned points during the 26 games.

After playing indoors all week, both players found the grass footing treacherous. They opened in cautious fashion and Kovacs had such trouble controlling his feet that he was caught out of position twice, as Riggs gained the decisive first set lead by breaking his service with a pair of well-aimed placements in the sixth game.

Riggs sped through the next six games to go two sets up and then gave Kovacs a chance to prolong the match by yielding his service in the third set's opening game. Kovacs managed to build up a 3-1 lead, but he tossed away that advantage by losing control of his delivery and double-faulting away the eighth game, which Riggs won to pull even.

After Riggs held the ninth to go into a 5-4 lead, Kovacs gave him the match in the next game by opening with a double-fault, netting two low returns and then committing another service error.

Riggs had but 41 errors, 25 nets and 16 out while totaling 33 earned points, including three service aces, during the speedy match. Kovacs made 31 earned points while committing 64 errors, including 3 double-faults.

Both singles finalists figured in the bowl doubles final, Riggs teaming with Charles Hare, of England, for a 6—1, 6—2 victory over Kovacs and Bobby Harman, also of Oakland, in a tame two-out-of-three sets final that found the Californian youngsters' tennis at a very low caliber.

American Legion Junior Baseball League slants: Saturday an all-star team composed of the outstanding players selected from the eight American Legion nines of the District will meet the Lord Baltimore squad, American Legion champions of Maryland, at 3:15 p. m. in the ball yard at Griffith Stadium . . . This promises to be one of the best junior tilts seen this season . . . Watch this column for further particulars, such as the names of the boys who will represent the District department, the diamond on which the practice game will be held prior to the championship battle and other arrangements in connection with the gala attraction.

* * * *

The pregame ceremonies will find Clark Griffith, president of the Washington Baseball Club, being singularly honored by officials of the local American Legion . . . Just before the first ball is tossed to open the all-star tilt Griffith will be presented with the "award of merit" for his outstanding service to and co-operation with the American Legion in the promotion of Americanism and good sportsmanship among the youngsters of this community . . . This is only the second time since 1919 that the award has been made, the first recipient being Uncle Joe Turner.

And as long as we are discussing the pregame ceremonies, it might be that you would like to know the arrangements that have been planned so far . . . First, both teams will parade to centerfield for the flag raising festivities led by the Sons of Legion Drum Corps . . . Second, the award to President Griffith as mentioned before will take place . . . Next on the schedule is the all-star battle . . . Perhaps we should have stated at the beginning of this paragraph that we were also listing the post-game ceremonies . . . For on the program following the game is this: A dinner to be given the Lord Baltimore squad.

* * * *

The postponed games that were supposed to be played last Sunday have been scheduled for Griffith Stadium, starting today . . . Agriculture Post and Pepco meet this afternoon at 3 p. m., and at 5 p. m. Police will engage Fort Stevens . . . Tomorrow at 3 p. m. Sergt. Jasper will tangle with the Cooley McCullough nine, and at 5 p. m. Nash meets Costello Post . . . In case of rain on either day the games will be played Friday . . . Griffith informed Legion officials that the stadium could also be used for the play-off to decide the second-half champions of the league . . . These champs will represent the District of Columbia in the regional baseball series to be staged in Belmont, N. C.

With Bill Ackerman

The weather over the week-end was an effective deterrent to many anglers from one end of the bay to the other. Those who did brave the almost continuous rain squalls, have failed so far, to report catches worth talking about.

ACKERMAN

The rock schools off Holland Point Bar in Herring Bay were productive for small catches late Saturday evening, which is more than can be said of the large school that has taken possession of the cove above Point Patience on the Patuxent.

Anglers reported the fish breaking almost continuously as far up as St. Leonards Lump. When this school of stripers does get going right, there should be some real fun, for a large number are really tackle-busters.

Reports of blues have come in during the past few days, from widely separated points. Capt. Windsor, from Deale, has been taking them under Tilghmans Island up to 5 pounds in weight, although the total in any catch has failed to exceed 10.

The same is true at Ridge, on St. Jeromes Creek, but here Capt. Taft Tippett says the largest do not exceed 2½ pounds. But there is this to be said about them—they are taken from large schools working the section between Northwest and Southwest Middles.

With normal weather conditions, this should mean good blue fishing in another week or two. At Messick and up the Virginia shore, the catches continue good, but the fish small. Ample reason, but few local fishermen are traveling that far to get them, even though they will take trips of as much as 300 miles if they have any size to them.

* * * *

There was no entry in the June bluefish class of the contest run each summer by the Fishing Fair, however in the rockfish class, the largest catch runs, as usual, the 15 pounds allowed by Maryland law. We often wonder just how large some of these 15-pound fish are, actually.

R. R. Hale, 707 Harvard street northwest, was tops in the hardhead class with a fish weighing 5 pounds. The slight trouble necessary to enter his catch brought him a swell Metallure bait assortment.

Talking of the fishing fair to be held at Rock Hall August 27 and 28, they say, almost daily, there is coming from hills and swamps of the bay country the most unearthly sounds ever heard, but it is only the "bang-board" farmers, "skip-jack" sailors, and "two-line" fishing guides tuning up for the fish-calling contest.

Capt. Buck Stevenson's pet "Old Joe," the great sea turtle, baymen have been watching for years, was taken again in a Cove Point pound net this past week. Almost a hundred pounds of barnacles were removed from his 6-foot shell, and a half-dozen hooks with trailing lines taken from his mouth, before he was released to continue his way to his favorite hunting grounds, the Gooses. "Old Joe" is the bayman's harbinger of bluefishing. They say, within two weeks of his appearance, the blues will be hitting.

Harry Randall and DeWitt Harry, Kingfish of Washington Ikes, with their ladies along to bring them luck, fished the Jacks Spot on Saturday with Capt. B. L. Raymond on the Lev-Lou.

Harry was well satisfied to take a 7 foot 10 inch marlin in the accepted manner, but DeWitt made up his mind not to let a fish, that had snapped the bait for all three outriggers, treat his fresh bait in any such contemptuous manner. And neither did he, for although he failed to hook the fish in orthodox fashion, he did manage to wrap a turn of the steel leader around his tail, and pump him to the boat.

Even so, DeWitt, our hat's off, for we couldn't get one in a like manner, but we're going to try again soon and take Bill Briggs along to assure getting the strikes.

* * * *

A letter from Acting Commissioner Charles E. Jackson, U. S. Bureau of Fisheries, says of "the program to tag white marlin at Ocean City. I can assure you that the Bureau of Fisheries is very much interested in doing something along this line—our Dr. Nesbitt is preparing a plan to submit to me. We have wired the West Coast for the proper kind of tags."

"At the earliest possible time after the survey the bureau will be in a position to propose its plan to the salt water anglers. With the co-operation of the anglers and the captains of the fishing boats, I believe we can start a program that will furnish much information of value."

The Ocean City Chamber of Commerce, as well as all the members of the Game Fishing Association have already signified their willingness to support a tagging program, in the hope that something may be learned of the greatest acrobat of any of our big sport fish.

At present, the boatmen are entirely guided by the wishes of their parties in regards to releasing these fish, although they believe, if it is not the anglers first, or it is not wanted for mounting, they should be released.

* * * *

Next to the catches of great numbers of white marlin off the north Cuban Coast by commercial anglers, the greatest number are taken at Ocean City, with those of Montauk and Miami following in that order. The Cuban fishermen have been taking many thousands of pounds, for a period exceeding 70 years, while Block Island and Nantucket harpooners have occasionally brought them in for years. At Miami and Ocean City, their taking by sportfishermen is hardly more than in its infancy. Yet, of their habits, nothing is known.

The present tagging program might supply a partial answer—so if you are a follower of the gamest fish of our offshore waters help by seeing that your captain tags, and releases, any you have no use for.

Loan Groups Strong Factor In Recovery

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Edward C. Baltz, president of the United States Building and Loan League, announces a highly satisfactory half year for that organization. Mr. Baltz, who is secretary of Perpetual Building Association of this city, reports that savings, building and loan associations paid $525,000,000 the first half of 1938 to their savers and investors.

This estimate is given by the league, national trade organization of the thrift and home financing institutions. With receipts on new savings greater than withdrawals, the associations thus played a substantial part in combatting business recession for old account holders facing curtailed incomes.

Turnover is approximately 10 per cent of the total assets of this group of institutions and represents one of the normal functions of the associations' long time program of helping the average man take care of himself, according to Mr. Baltz. It is explained that the half billion dollar disbursement is considerably larger than the estimated volume of public direct relief given during the same period, the latter being around $300,000,000. In this way, Mr. Baltz reminds, savings habits which make it possible for people to rely upon their own money, actually played a larger part in keeping the wheels of business going than the direct relief program.

Dividends.

Dividends paid out in cash on lump-sim accounts of investors accounted for about $50,000,000 of the disbursement. The rest represented withdrawals of capital for emergency and other purposes. These figures do not allow for the transfer of accounts from one savings and loan institution to another and Mr. Baltz comments that probably a million or more dollars of the disbursement really represented such a switch in investment rather than the using up of funds saved.

The total of $525,000,000 does not represent the entire sum paid out by the associations during the first half of this year, since there was a disbursement of some $100,000,000 by the institutions for annual property taxes and periodic fire and storm insurance payments. These funds had been accumulated by home borrowers in installments during the past year as a preparation for the coming due of these obligations.

D. C. Life Insurance.

Life insurance sales in the District of Columbia in June showed a 25 per cent recession in comparison with the month last year, statistics from the Life Insurance Sales Research Bureau of Hartford, Conn., reveal. The June drop was 1 per cent under the national average and local sales are also 26 per cent below in the half year's comparison. New policies written here during June aggregated $4,933,000 and the half year's business totaled $29,736,000. Thirty-six per cent of the companies engaged in business here, however, reported more business last month than in June a year ago.

Maryland sales were the best in the local section during the month, new policies amounting to $7,775,000 being only 14 per cent under the total in June last year. Sales in that State for the six months of 1933 totaled $46,053,000, or 14 per cent below last year's comparative period.

Virginia business also revealed a 24 per cent decline for the month, with volume totaling $6,415,000. The half-year's total was $40,305,000. North Carolina was 17 per cent lower in June and 18 per cent in the six months. South Carolina's sales were 28 per cent below in the June comparison and 26 per cent in the six months.

Although representing a 24 per cent decrease, sales for the entire country reached a total of $502,588,000 for June and $3,043,893,000 for the half year. Washington's June sales figure was equalled by Philadelphia and was ahead of Boston, Chicago, Cleveland, Detroit and St. Louis. The local mark was exceeded by Los Angeles and New York.

A. B. A. Trust Division.

Bruce Baird, a vice president of National Savings & Trust Co., and elected District of Columbia vice president for the trust company division of the American Bankers Association, has been informed by the division's headquarters in New York of its program for the administrative year. The division will follow closely all banking developments in the 48 States, observe legislation dealing with trust matters, keep up with all new methods and practices, co-operate with State associations on trust programs and supply speakers for conferences and meetings.

Banking Notes.

Manager Charles K. West, of the K Street Branch of Security Savings & Commercial Bank, has been taking his annual vacation.

Announcement is made that F. M. Newson, jr., vice president and cashier of the Farmers & Merchants Bank of Lawrenceville, Va., has been elected president of that institution, succeeding the late J. R. Temple.

Cotton Yields To Hedge Sales

New York, July 25 (AP).—Cotton lost its early gains today and closed 5 to 8 points lower as Texas hedge selling increased. Failure of unfavorable weather reports to attract more demand was disappointing to early buyers. December eased from 8.99 to close at a low of 8.84.

The market opened 5 to 7 points higher and active positions soon sold up to net gains of 7 to 9 points, the highest levels for the day, as reports of further rains in the cotton belt over the week-end created further apprehension of insect damage and a crop setback. More liquidation developed when December approached within a point of the 9-cent level.

Federal Debt Is Cut in June For 4th Month

New York, July 25.—Spending by the Federal Government in June, the final month of the 1937-1938 fiscal year, was at a considerably lower rate than in the corresponding month last year, while gross receipts were slightly larger than a year ago, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute today. The deficit in June consequently amounted to only $54,000,000 this year as against $434,000,000 last year. The Government had sufficient funds in the Treasury not only to meet this deficit but to reduce the debt by $258,000,000. The debt consequently showed a decrease for the fourth consecutive month to $37,165,000,000 from the peak of $37,633,000,000 at the end of February.

On July 12 the Administration issued a new estimate of the 1938-1939 Federal budget. This differed widely from the original estimate made public last January, as the result of the Administration's decision to return to its former policy of heavy spending.

According to the revised budget, expenditures during the current fiscal year will be larger than any previous year with the exception of 1918 and 1919, when war was a factor in the situation. Expenditures in 1938-1939 will be $1,310,000,000 larger than in 1937-1938. As the result of this increase in spending and the prospect of a sharp drop in receipts, the Administration estimates that the deficit this year will amount to $4,085,000,000 as against $1,525,000,000 last year.

In order to meet this year's deficit, it will be necessary to borrow $3,585,000,000, since the Administration is not planning to reduce the Treasury balance by more than $500,000,000. This means an increase in the debt from $37,165,000,000 to a new high record of $40,750,000,000.

Business Loans Drop $7,000,000 in Week

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that commercial, industrial and agricultural loans by member banks in 101 principal cities declined $7,000,000 in the week ended July 20. In the preceding week a $3,000,000 increase was recorded.

Loans in New York City declined $13,000,000, but decreases there and in other centers were offset partially by a $6,000,000 gain in the Atlanta district and $5,000,000 in the St. Louis district.

Steel Operations Advance to 37%

New York, July 25 (AP).—Operations in the steel industry for the current week will advance .6 of 1 point to 37.0 per cent of capacity, compared with 36.4 per cent last week, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today.

A month ago operations were at the rate of 28.7 per cent of capacity, while a year ago they were 84.3 per cent.

Prices Continue to Move Higher With Greater Public Demand for Stocks.

New York, July 25.—Stocks continued their forward march today and the bearish party is wondering how many times they will have to yell "nuff" in order to make the worthy proponents of rising prices let up a little. For prices have been rising with great regularity, come wars and high waters, and the temperature has become extremely warm for those who are short. According to all the technicians it is high time for a respectable correction, which means a normal drop in prices to all those who do not read the financial columns with their morning bacon and eggs. But somehow the correction is slow in making its appearance.

In any event, the bullish forces continued in full control of the situation today. Prices mounted sharply in opening trading, thus continuing the final fling of the closing minutes of Saturday's session, and while trading quieted down somewhat later, the majority of the speculative leaders held plus signs to the close. Getting satistical on the matter, there were 483 with said plus signs against only 243 that declined. And the composite average showed a net advance of 0.19 point, which is far from sensational, but was enough to convince the doubters that the public still prefers the long side. Trading of 2,106,500 shares was plenty for the brokerage fraternity, and there were times during the day when the ticker could not keep pace with the rapidity of trading.

Brokers reported there was a greater public demand for securities, which is not always a bullish signal, and there were times during the day when some big blocks changed hands, ranging up to 8,000 shares.

Looking at the averages of various groups, it was interesting to the technicians to note that a number of groups made new highs for the year.

The manufacturing, oil, copper, railroad equipment and motor groups reached new highs for 1938. This was enough to carry the average of the market to a new high for the year, even though the rail securities were a bit laggard.

Aiding the metals was a boost of an eighth cent in copper and an advance of 50 cents a ton in steel scrap. Both the metals and steels were in the forefront of the day's advance. Most active stock of the day was United States Steel, followed by General Motors, which made a small advance, while Chrysler was up 1¼. Still irregular were the amusement stocks, which have not yet settled after the Government's attack upon leading motion-picture companies, in an effort to make them rid themselves of control of theaters.

Also included in the bright business news of the day was a drop in business failures to a new low for the year. On the oppositive side of the ledger were some car loadings reports from leading systems showing a decline from the previous week.

Commodities did not do as well as stocks. Wheat tumbled nearly 2 cents on an increase in the visible supply, reaching lows not touched in five years. The close in Chicago was down 1⅛ to 1⅝ cents. Cotton also was lower, closing off 5 to 8 points on hedge selling and rains in the cotton belt, despite higher Liverpool cables.

Rail Bonds Higher.

The bond market gained ground today led by rising prices and greater activity in the rails. Though all grades of carrier liens were ahead of the general list, second grade railroad bonds were well in the front throughout the day and absorbed some late selling to close fractions below the day's best. Trading on the stock exchange was comparatively active, totaling $9,440,000 par value, compared with $6,505,000 Monday a week ago.

Industrial bonds were firm, following sustained strength in junior securities, though the gains were less spectacular than those shown by the lower grade rails. Container Corp. 5s gained 1½ points to 97½, General Steel Casting added 2 to 65 and Goodrich 5s and 4½s added ⅛ and ⅛, respectively.

United States Government obligations were dull and irregular, with the various direct and guaranteed bonds ending with half of them up small fractions and the other half off.

The low-priced obligations of companies in receivership showed some substantial gains. The New York & Erie extended 4s gained 9 points to 84, but the Norfolk & Southern 5s of '41 lost 4¾ to 43¼. The Nickel Plate 6 per cent notes, on which a 3-year extension was requested today, lost 2 points to 60, while the road's other obligations showed fractional gains.

Utility issues were blanketed under the activity of rails and industrials, but the list was generally firm, with good gains in several of the issues listed on the curb. Refunding mortgage 5s of the Hudson & Manhattan, which was recently given a fare boost, rose to a new top. B. M. T. 4s were active but little changed. Western Union 5s of '60 gained 3 points and the telegraph company's other issues showed strength.

The Mobile & Ohio 5s reached a new high in the forenoon and closed fractionally higher. The Illinois Central 4s of '53 and '55 ended at new highs for the year.

Wheat Prices Sink Two Cents To 5-Year Low

Large Increase in Visible Supply a Main Cause of Downturn.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 25.—Tumbling nearly 2 cents a bushel maximum today, wheat prices here smashed down to bottom levels unreached before in five years.

Serving to force values lower was a huge increase of 18,034,000 bushels in the United States visible supply total. Forecasts of record world wheat production this season, together with official suggestions that this year's exports from the United States would be smaller than those of last year acted also as weight on the market.

Downturns of prices here were in the face of securities advances, and were especially promoted by big receipts in spring crop centers, including 454 cars today at Minneapolis, almost half of it from newly harvested fields. Meanwhile, export demand for North American wheat was of only inconsequential volume.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were 1⅛-1⅝ cents lower compared with Saturday's finish. September 67⅞-68, December 70-70¼, corn ¾-1¾ down, September 56¾-56⅞, December 55⅝-55¼, oats ¾-1⅛ off, rye showing 1⅞-1¾ drop, and provisions unchanged to 12 cents advance.

Copper at 10 Cents; Fourth Rise in July

New York, July 25 (AP).—The price of domestic copper was raised ⅛ of a cent a pound to 10 cents today, marking the fourth rise in the metal thus far in July. The new quotation places copper at the highest level since May 19.

The successive boosts this month began on July 1 when the price was raised from 9¾ cents to 9½. It was marked up again on July 5 to 9¾ and last Saturday was pushed up another ⅛ of a cent to 9⅞.

As on previous occasions, the domestic advance followed higher prices abroad where there has been exceptionally heavy takings in recent weeks. Sales were reported made abroad today as high as 10.22½ cents a pound and in London electrolytic wire bars rose to the equivalent of 10.27½ cents.

Scrap Steel Higher.

Dow Jones & Co., in a Pittsburgh dispatch, said today that the price of No. 1 heavy melting steel scrap had advanced 50 cents a ton to $18, a peak for the recovery movement which set in a month ago when the price was $10.75 a ton.

WPA's 3-Year Spending Set at $37 Per Capita

Hopkins Agency Used 55.7 Pct. of 8.6-Billion Total Recovery Funds.

Copyright, 1938, by the United Press.

The politically embattled Works Progress Administration has spent more than $37 for every man, woman and child in the country since the New Deal launched its relief-recovery program in 1935, an official Treasury report revealed last night.

The report shows that since 1935 and up to and including the last fiscal year, $8,656,321,646 was made available to fight the depression. Of the total the WPA spent $4,834,974,053, or 55.7 per cent, a per capita of more than $37 on the basis of a population of 130,000,000.

The $1,635,000,000 outlay for the present fiscal year will bring the agency's spending to the unprecedented sum of $6,469,974,053.

Agency Under Attack.

The report was completed while the WPA and its administrator, Harry Hopkins, are under attack along almost the entire political front. Republicans and anti-New Dealers alike are waging a concerted assault against the agency, charging it is a political slush-fund and demanding that administration of relief be returned to the States.

The report covers all forms of relief-recovery spending up to last June 30, end of the 1938 fiscal year. It shows that for 1935-36 Congress made $4,679,473,143 available and that all of it was spent.

The sum of $2,247,538,001 was appropriated and spent in 1937 when business was improving. Only $1,760,810,502 was appropriated in 1938, and all of it was spent except $31,500,000. A total of $2,149,350,000 was appropriated for the 1939 fiscal year and President Roosevelt, in recent revised budget estimates, said an additional $500,000,000 would be necessary.

FERA SPENT 934 MILLION.

Just before the WPA came into existence late in 1935 the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, which preceded it, spent $934,592,359, or 10.8 per cent of the 1935 outlay.

	Total.	Pct.
Agriculture (without public roadsand farm security)	$136.615.976	1.6
Bureau of Public Roads	506.828.601	5.9
Farm security	556.883.719	6.4

Pub. Wks. Administration	396.194.391	4.6
Unallocated	1.200.000	...

New York, receiving $1,096,202,888 during the four-year period, topped all States in the amount of Federal relief expenditures. Other leading States were Pennsylvania, $709,919,034; Illinois, $486.742.797; Ohio, $465,391,296, and California, $458,774,925.

The following table gives total Federal relief outlays by States (in thousands of dollars) for the entire period, and for the last three fiscal years:

MAJ. A. V. DALRYMPLE.

Maj. A. V. Dalrymple, former prohibition director, died in Emergency Hospital last night from injuries he suffered when struck by an automobile Saturday. He was 62.

Born in Lee County, Texas, Maj. Dalrymple served with the Navy in the Spanish American War and then returned to Texas to teach. Afterward he went to the Philippines as a school teacher and was later appointed as governor of one of the island provinces.

In 1914 Maj. Dalrymple studied law at a college in Valparaiso, Ind., and then practiced in Chicago. When the United States entered the World War he was made a major in the Intelligence Service.

He served abroad throughout the War and was with the Army of Occupation in Germany. After the war Maj. Dalrymple practiced law in Texas and then, in 1925, he moved to California. In 1933 he was named National Prohibition Director by President Roosevelt, succeeding Gen. Amos W. W. Woodcock. Later he was a special assistant to the Attorney General.

Maj. Dalrymple, who lived at 1308 Sixteenth street northwest, leaves his widow; two daughters, Mrs. Frank Fletcher, of Bethesda, Md., and Miss Alice Dalrymple, of Washington, and two sons, James McK. and John Marshall Dalrymple, both of Washington.

Labor Board Nullifies A.F.L. 'Closed Shop'

Bakery Contract Is Termed Unfair; Union Election Victory Also Hit.

The Labor Relations Board nullified yesterday a closed shop contract between the Ward Baking Co., of Baltimore, and a union affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

In another ruling it nullified an election won by the A. F. of L. at the Tennessee Copper Co., on the grounds that foremen of the company had coerced employes to vote for the federation union. It ordered another election within 20 days among the company's employes in the Duckbin Basin, Cooperhill, Tenn.

The board said the baking company's action in signing the contract was an unfair labor practice because the A. F. of L. union was not the freely chosen representative of a majority of the employes involved. The board directed that approximately 200 inside production and maintenance employes decide at an election within 20 days whether they desire representation by the A. F. of L., the C. I. O., or neither.

Ordered to Refrain.

The board also ordered the baking company to refrain from encouraging workers to join the Bakery and Confectionary Workers International Union of America, the A. F. of L. affiliate, and to refrain "otherwise from interfering with employes' rights to self-organization."

The board said the central issue of the case was whether supervisory employes of the bakery gave active assistance to the A. F. of L organizing campaign when a C. I. O. union (the Unted Bakery Workers Local Industrial) also was recruiting members.

It held that the Ward Co. was not relieved from responsibility "for the union activity of its supervisory employes by virtue of such employes' membership in a labor organization," adding that "where such employes actively interfere with one labor organization and promote another, the employer itself must be deemed to have engaged in such interference and promotion."

Among other instances of alleged coercion, the board said that "O. K. Lyle, a foreman, told Noah Parris that the C. I. O. was un-American and that if the C. I. O. won the employes would have no jobs."

Tydings Urges Federal Credit To Aid Impoverished Business

By the Associated Press.

Frederick, Md., July 25.—Private business spent $23,500,000,000 more than it took in during the past seven years, Senator Millard E. Tydings said tonight in calling for greater encouragement of industries through "Government credit."

Speaking at a political rally in the courthouse, Senator Tydings, who seeks reelection, said the Government during that period has spent $7,000,000,000 less than business to "meet the ravages of the depression."

"The businesses of the country have used up the resources they had saved during the comparatively good years preceding 1929, and more besides, in many cases, since the depression started," he said.

"Business has paid from its resources, to stem the tide of the depression, to keep people employed, to keep the doors open, to keep the plants operating.

"It is obvious that business cannot contribute in the future as it has in the past toward economy recovery, for no branch of our American business has the money.

Of the 11 industries listed by Tydings only agriculture showed more income. He said farmers received $2,843,000,000 more than they paid out, due chiefly to Government payments made to them.

The excess of expenditures he apportioned among:

Mining and quarrying, $2,084,000,000; electric power, light and gas, $1,274,000,000;

Manufacturing, $7,146,000,000; construction, $1,207,000,000; transportation, $1,177,000,000; communication, $279,000,000; trade, $5,000,000,000; finance, $3,416,000,000; general services, professional and otherwise, $2,838,000,000, and miscellaneous enterprises, $1,951,000,000.

Hearing Holds Widow in Death Of Mrs. Sweeny

Detective Testifies Woman Admitted Abortion; Bond Is $1,000.

Mrs. Mae Conner, 43-year-old widow, was held to the grand jury in connection with the death of Mrs. Justine Sweeny, by a coroner's jury yesterday. Witnesses at the inquest, held at the morgue, attributed Mrs. Sweeney's death to an attempted illegal operation and quoted Mrs. Conner as confessing she performed it. Bond was set at $1,000.

Mrs. Sweeney, daughter of Representative Crosser of Ohio, was found dead Thursday in Mrs. Conner's apartment, 2550 Fourteenth street northwest. Arrested by Detective Sergeant Jeremiah Flaherty, Mrs. Conner, who did not testify yesterday, at first denied knowing the cause of the woman's death.

"Confession" Retold.

"She said Mrs. Sweeney had come in for a visit and had some sort of attack," Detective Flaherty told the jury. "Then she said she wanted to tell the truth. She said that July 13 or 14 Mrs. Sweeney came to her and told her a Mrs. Moore had sent her. Mrs. Sweeney explained she was in a family way but Mrs. Conner told her she wasn't doing abortions now."

Mrs. Conner decided several days later to perform the operation, Flaherty said, and an appointment was made for Thursday. Mrs. Sweeney was to pay $50 in several installments. But during the operation, Mrs. Conner told Flaherty, he testified, the patient sat up in bed, complained of feeling ill, and fell over.

After trying in vain to revive her, Mrs. Conner called Dr. Baxter S. John. Testifying yesterday, Dr. John said he had known Mrs. Conner as a patient for three or four years. He said he looked at Mrs. Sweeny and knew from her facial expression she was dead. Without making a further examination he told Mrs. Conner to call the coroner and left the apartment immediately.

Coroner A. Magruder McDonald, describing the results of the autopsy in the case, explained death was the result of "an air embolism produced during an attempt to perform an abortion." Air bubbles had made their way into the blood stream, he said, and caused death on reaching the heart. He added that air embolism during an abortion is highly unusual.

Mrs. Sweeny, 29-year-old mother of two daughters, would have given birth to a son in about 3½ months, Dr. McDonald said. Her husband, Charles A. Sweeny, of Silver Spring, Md., an attorney for the Federal Trade Commission, told police Thursday he did not know Mrs. Conner.

Power-Boat Chief Sees D.C. as Race Center of America

Washington is slated to be the sail and motorboat racing center of the United States after the President's Cup regatta on the Potomac in September, declared Ivan A. Bickelhaupt, executive secretary of the American Power Boat Association, at a luncheon of the Fo'csle Club yesterday at the Raleigh.

Other speakers included Andrew Duffy, Harry Smith, L. Gordon Leach and Malcolm Lamborne, jr. Charles R. Bush, jr., cartograph engineer of the Coast and Geodetic Survey, and Russell Arundel, attorner, were introduced as new members of the club by James A. Councilor, general chairman of the regatta, who presided.
